ESCAMBIA COUNTY SCHOOL BOARD,

Defendant.

AMENDED COMPLAINT

This lawsuit, on behalf of PEN American Center, Inc. (“PEN America”), select book authors, a book publisher, and a number of parents of students attending public schools in Escambia County (collectively, “Plaintiffs”), challenges the decisions of the Escambia County School Board (the “School Board”) to remove and restrict books from public school libraries within the Escambia County School District (the “School District”). The School Board has done so based on its disagreements with the ideas expressed in those books. In every decision to remove a book, the School Board sided with a challenger expressing openly discriminatory bases for the challenge, overruling in the process the recommendations of review committees at the school and district levels. These restrictions and removals have disproportionately targeted books by or about people of color and/or LGBTQ people, and have prescribed an orthodoxy of opinion that violates the First and Fourteenth Amendments.

I. INTRODUCTION

1. The Supreme Court has long recognized that “[t]he vigilant protection of constitutional freedoms is nowhere more vital than in the community of American schools,” which serve as a “marketplace of ideas.” Tinker v. Des Moines Indep. Cmty. Sch. Dist., 393 U.S. 503, 512 (1969). That is because “the Nation’s future depends upon leaders trained through wide exposure to that robust exchange of ideas which discovers truth out of a multitude of tongues, rather than through any kind of authoritative selection.” Id. (cleaned up).

2. School libraries, where students discover new areas of interest and engage in voluntary inquiry outside the context of required curriculum, are an essential part of this exchange of ideas.

3. While school administrators concededly “possess significant discretion to determine the content of their school libraries,” including determining whether books are age-appropriate, that “discretion may not be exercised in a narrowly partisan or political manner.” Board of Education v. Pico, 457 U.S. 853, 870 (1982) (emphasis added). That is because “[o]ur Constitution does not permit the official suppression of ideas.” Id. at 871. Accordingly, the First Amendment bars a school district from removing books from school libraries, or restricting access to such books, based on political or ideological disagreement with the ideas they express.

4. Plaintiffs bring this lawsuit because that is exactly what is happening in Escambia County. Books are being ordered removed from libraries, or subject to restricted access within those libraries, based on ideologically-driven efforts to push certain ideas out of schools. Even though parents can already opt their child out of having access to particular books, the School Board is summarily ordering the district-wide removal of books based on the openly ideological, political, and discriminatory views of a small minority and against the recommendations of review committees—composed of parents, teachers, principals, media specialists, and other community members within the School District—that follow a robust review process focused on whether materials are age-appropriate and educational. This disregard for professional deliberation and guidance underscores that the removals are ideological and political, not pedagogical.

5. As a result, the School Board is depriving students of access to a wide range of viewpoints, and depriving the authors and publishers of the removed and restricted books of the opportunity to engage with readers and disseminate their ideas to their intended audiences. Such viewpoint discrimination violates the First Amendment.

6. Today, Escambia County seeks to remove or limit access to books a small minority views as too “woke.” In the 1970s, schools sought to bar books by Langston Hughes (among others). Tomorrow, it could be books about Christianity,¹ the country’s founders, or our nation’s war heroes. All of these removals run afoul of the First Amendment, which is rightly disinterested in the cause du jour.

7. The actions of the School Board also violate the Equal Protection Clause because the books being singled out for possible removal are disproportionately books by non-white and/or LGBTQ authors, or which address

¹ Notably, the Bible has been subject to challenge in Escambia County public school libraries, although it was not removed because it is authorized as an appropriate educational resource under a separate Florida statute. But, in other jurisdictions, book challenges have resulted in the removal of the Bible from public school libraries. See Tilda Wilson, A Utah school district has removed the Bible from some schools’ shelves, NPR, June 2, 2023, <https://www.npr.org/2023/06/02/1179906120/utah-bible-book-challenge>.

topics related to race or LGBTQ identity. This is no accident. Government action may not be premised on such discriminatory motivations.

8. The plaintiffs bringing this suit include (a) PEN America, a nonprofit member-based organization that represents authors throughout the United States, including authors whose books already have been removed from libraries in the School District and targeted for future removal and subjected to restricted access in the meantime; (b) authors whose books have been ordered removed from or subjected to restricted access in these libraries; (c) Penguin Random House LLC (“PRH”), the publisher of many books that have been ordered removed from, or subjected to restricted access in, these libraries; and (d) parents of students who attend schools in the School District, who are suing on behalf of both themselves and their minor children for access to removed and restricted books.

9. The plaintiffs have joined together in this lawsuit to vindicate the rights of parents, students, authors, and book publishers to ensure that public school libraries continue to serve all communities and provide spaces dedicated to the exploration and dissemination of a wide variety of ideas, points of view, and experiences, free from viewpoint discrimination and discrimination based on race, sexuality, or gender identity.

II. PARTIES

A. Plaintiffs

10. Plaintiff PEN America is a nonprofit membership organization headquartered in New York. Founded in 1922, PEN America works to ensure that people everywhere have the freedom to create literature, to convey information and ideas, to express their views, and to access the views, ideas, and literatures of others. PEN America's membership is made up of more than 7,500 novelists, journalists, nonfiction writers, editors, poets, essayists, playwrights, publishers, translators, agents, and other writing professionals. Members of PEN America live in every state in the country.

11. PEN America operates "Free Expression Programs" that serve to defend writers and journalists and protect free expression rights in the United States and around the world. These efforts typically include research and reports, public advocacy, and campaigns on behalf of particular policy issues or individuals. Topics for these programs have included campus free speech, online harassment, and writers and artists facing political persecution abroad.

12. PEN America includes among its members many authors whose books have been removed or subject to restricted access within the School District. These include each of the Author Plaintiffs, as well as other award-winning authors such as Margaret Atwood, Judy Blume, Alex Gino, John Green, Khaled Hosseini, Susan Kuklin, and Jodi Picoult.

13. Plaintiffs Sarah Brannen, George M. Johnson, David Levithan, Kyle Lukoff, and Ashely Hope Pérez (collectively, the “Author Plaintiffs”) are each authors whose books have either been removed from libraries within the School District, or are currently targeted for such removal and subject to indefinite restricted access during the review period.

14. Plaintiff Brannen resides in Massachusetts. She has authored and/or illustrated 23 books for children. Her book Uncle Bobby’s Wedding was challenged in February 2023 and is currently subject to restricted access in elementary school libraries pending review. No schedule has yet been set for the review of Uncle Bobby’s Wedding.

15. Plaintiff Johnson is a resident of California and Black and non-binary; they are the author of young adult books. Johnson’s book All Boys Aren’t Blue is a “memoir of growing up Black and gay” in the form of a series of coming-of-age essays. All Boys Aren’t Blue was challenged in September 2022. Despite a unanimous vote by the district review committee in favor of retaining the book in high school libraries, the School Board voted to remove All Boys Aren’t Blue from all libraries on February 21, 2023.

16. Plaintiff Levithan is a New Jersey resident. He is a white, gay author of young adult fiction. Levithan's book Two Boys Kissing, which was previously generally accessible within high school libraries in the School District, was challenged in September 2022, and is currently subject to restricted access pending review. No schedule has been set for the review of Two Boys Kissing.

17. Plaintiff Lukoff is a Pennsylvania resident. He is a white, transgender man, and the author of multiple children's books. Prior to becoming a published author, he was an elementary school librarian. His book When Aidan Became a Brother was challenged in September 2022. Despite a district review committee recommending 4–1 that the book be retained in libraries at all levels, the School Board voted to remove When Aidan Became a Brother from all libraries on February 20, 2023.

18. Another book, Too Bright to See, also by Plaintiff Lukoff and published by Plaintiff PRH, was challenged in February 2023 and is currently subject to restricted access in elementary school libraries pending review. No schedule has been set for the review of Too Bright to See.

19. Plaintiff Pérez is a white woman and resident of Ohio. She is an author of young adult fiction, a former public school teacher of high school English, and, currently, a literature professor at The Ohio State University. Her book Out of Darkness, which was previously generally accessible within high school libraries in the School District, was challenged in September 2022, and is currently subject to restricted access pending review. No schedule has been set for the review of Out of Darkness.

20. For each Author Plaintiff, public school libraries are a critical means of reaching their intended audiences, and obtaining the broadest possible readership. Accordingly, it causes serious harm for them, personally and professionally, for their books to be removed from public school libraries or subject to restricted access within such libraries.

21. Plaintiff PRH is a Delaware Limited Liability Corporation headquartered in New York. It is a general interest publisher committed to publishing books for everyone. Two books published by PRH have already been removed from some School District libraries: The Bluest Eye by Toni Morrison and Push by Sapphire.

22. Several more books published by PRH have been targeted for removal and are currently subject to indefinite restricted access pending completion of the review process. Among such books are: Beloved by Toni Morrison, The Freedom Writers Diary: How a Teacher and 150 Teens Used Writing to Change Themselves and the World Around Them by Erin Gruwell, The God of Small Things by Arundhati Roy, Handmaid's Tale by Margaret Atwood, The Kite Runner by Khaled Hosseini, Milo Imagines the World by Matt de La Pena, Slaughterhouse-Five by Kurt Vonnegut, Too Bright to See by Plaintiff Lukoff, and Two Boys Kissing by Plaintiff David Levithan.

23. PRH's mission is to lay the seeds for the future of reading for generations to come by promoting literacy, giving voice to many and varied experiences and stories and fostering empathy and inspiring free and open debate. PRH aims to publish books that provide children with a gateway to the whole world. Continued inclusion in public school libraries is critical to PRH's mission, especially for books intended for elementary and young-adult readers.

24. Plaintiffs Lindsay Durtschi, Benjamin Glass, Ann Novakowski, Sean Parker, Erica Roy, Christopher Scott Satterwhite, and Carin Smith (collectively, the "Parent Plaintiffs") are parents of students currently attending elementary, middle, or high schools in the School District. They bring these claims both on behalf of themselves, as parents who want their children to have access to books that have been removed from, or restricted within, their children's school library, and their minor children, who also want such access.

25. Plaintiff Durtschi is white and a Florida resident. She is the mother, next of friend, and general guardian of rising second grade and fourth grade students at A.K. Suter Elementary School in the School District. In the upcoming school year, her children would like to check out specific books from their school library that are currently unavailable because they have been removed or restricted. In addition, Durtschi wants her children to have access to these books, and others like them, among other reasons, for her children to be presented with a wide range of different viewpoints and experiences so that they will be better prepared to engage with a wide range of people.

26. Plaintiff Glass is white and a Florida resident. He is the father, next of friend, and general guardian of a rising eighth grade student at Ferry Pass Middle School in the School District. In the upcoming school year, his daughter wants to check out specific books from her school library that are currently unavailable because they have been removed or restricted. In addition, Glass wants his child to have access to these books, and others like them, among other reasons, so that she is exposed to the dangers of sexual assault and the importance of consent, and, thus, better prepared to navigate these issues. He further sees value in her reading about the intersection between stories about minority communities and stories involving sexual assault so that she will appreciate the unique challenges that people from other backgrounds face.

27. Plaintiff Novakowski is white and a Florida resident. She is the mother, next of friend, and general guardian of a rising first grade student at A.K. Suter Elementary School in the School District. In the upcoming school year, her child wants to check out specific books from her school library that are currently unavailable because they have been removed or restricted. In addition, Novakowski wants her child to have access to these books, and others like them, among other reasons, so that she is presented with different viewpoints and experiences and, thus, better prepared to engage with a wide range of people.

28. Plaintiff Parker is Black and a Florida resident. He is the father, next of friend, and general guardian of a rising eighth grade student at Beulah Middle School in the School District. In the upcoming school year, his child wants to check out specific books from his school library that are currently unavailable because they have been removed or restricted. In addition, Parker wants his child to have access to these books, and others like them, among other reasons, in order to be exposed to books by and about Black people to help him develop a stronger sense of his cultural identity.

29. Plaintiff Roy is white and a Florida resident. She is the mother, next of friend, and a general guardian of a rising fifth grade student at Scenic Heights Elementary School and a rising ninth grade student at West Florida High School in the School District. In the upcoming school year, her children would like to check out specific books from their school library that are currently unavailable because they have been removed or restricted. In addition, Roy wants her children to have access to these books, and others like them, among other reasons, in order to be exposed to books by South Asian authors and about South Asian culture to help them to better understand their heritage. She also wants them to be exposed to books that present different viewpoints and experiences so that they will be better prepared to engage with a wide range of people.

30. Plaintiff Satterwhite is biracial and a Florida resident. He is the father, next of friend, and general guardian of a rising tenth grade student at Pensacola High School in the School District. In the upcoming school year, his son wants to check out specific books from his school library that are currently unavailable because they have been removed or restricted. In addition, Satterwhite wants his son to have access to these books, and others like them, so that he can use his school experience to explore Black history and a wide array of other subjects and experiences based on his own interests.

31. Plaintiff Smith is Black and a Florida resident. She is the mother, next of friend, and general guardian of two rising twelfth grade students at Pine Forest High School in the School District. In the upcoming school year, her children want to check out specific books from their school library that are currently unavailable because they have been removed or restricted. In addition, Smith wants her children to have access to these books, and others like them, among other reasons, in order to encounter books by and about Black people to help them develop a stronger sense of their cultural identity.

B. Defendant

32. Defendant School Board is the five-member governing body of the School District, elected from geographical districts within Escambia County.

33. The School Board oversees and manages all schools within the School District, and, by statute, has the capacity to sue and be sued.

III. JURISDICTION AND VENUE

34. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331 and 1343 because this action arises under the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution, and under 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

35. Venue in this district is proper pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) because the Defendant resides in this district and a substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to Plaintiffs' claims occurred in this district.

IV. FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

A. The Unique and Important Function of Public School Libraries

36. Libraries occupy a unique and important role within public schools. Like schools more generally, school libraries are spaces for learning and the exploration of ideas. But, unlike a structured classroom setting, libraries afford students opportunities to learn and explore ideas in self-directed ways, guided by their own interests, curiosities, and questions about the world. They provide students with the opportunity to engage with and explore new and unfamiliar perspectives and ideas, as well as to see representations of their own experiences, communities, and ideas.

37. As the Supreme Court has emphasized, it is fundamental to our understanding of what schools are that “students must always remain free to inquire, to study and to evaluate, to gain new maturity and understanding.” Pico, 457 U.S. at 868. And, “[t]he school library is the principal locus of such freedom.” Id. at 869 (emphasis added). That is because, “in the school library a student can literally explore the unknown, and discover areas of interest and thought not covered by the prescribed curriculum. The student learns that a library is a place to test or expand upon ideas presented to him, in or out of the classroom.” Id. (cleaned up).

38. Accordingly, public school libraries are crucial spaces for student learning. In libraries, students can explore their own interests, and encounter different ideas and experiences in ways that help prepare them for citizenship in our diverse, democratic society.

39. The School Board’s own Policy Manual reflects this understanding of the role and purpose of school libraries. It provides that one of the “function[s]” of libraries within the School District “is to contribute to the development of informed and responsible citizens,” and that “[i]t is the duty of the [School] District to provide a wide range of materials of different levels of difficulty, with diversity of appeal and representing different points of view taking into account the varied interests, abilities, and maturity levels of the pupils being served.” Ex. 1 at 8.

40. The Policy Manual further provides that “school libraries media centers . . . shall,” inter alia, “provide education media that reflects differing and/or opposing viewpoints; [and] provide materials which reflect the ideas and beliefs of many ethnic, religious, and political groups that have contributed to . . . American and world heritage and culture.” Id. at 9.

41. School libraries are also of great importance to book authors and book publishers, especially with regard to books aimed at children and young adults. The right to speak means little without the ability to reach listeners. It is, thus, extraordinarily important to book authors and book publishers that their books continue to be fully accessible in public school libraries. This is especially so with respect to those students who lack easy access to books and learning material outside of school. For such students, public school libraries may be the only way for them to access an author’s or publisher’s book.

B. The Push to Remove Books

42. The wave of book removals and restrictions at issue in this lawsuit began on or about May 23, 2022. On that date, Vicki Baggett, a language arts teacher at the School District’s Northview High School, filled out a form for the “Request for the Reconsideration of Educational Media.” This would be the beginning of what turned out to be a widespread—and largely successful—campaign to restrict access to books throughout the School District.

43. Baggett’s efforts have borrowed heavily from, and formed part of, a national campaign to remove books from public school libraries based on ideological objections to their contents, particularly, their exploration of themes related to race and/or LGBTQ identity.

44. That campaign has been spearheaded by certain national organizations, such as the Florida-based “Moms for Liberty.” Moms for Liberty is a politically conservative organization that is focused on combating what it describes as the “woke” influence in public schools. The organization shares and disseminates lists of books it finds politically objectionable, and urges individuals to seek the removal of those books from school libraries.

45. Baggett has since spoken at a Moms for Liberty meeting in neighboring Santa Rosa County about her efforts to remove books in Escambia County public schools and reportedly “shared tips on how to get content removed.”²

46. The subject of the first form Baggett filled out was The Perks of Being a Wallflower (“Wallflower”) by Stephen Chbosky. Baggett objected to the book’s inclusion in classroom sets for potential use as an optional novel for study in high schools.³

47. Wallflower, based on the author’s own experiences growing up in suburban Pittsburgh in the 1980s, deals with common adolescent struggles, including drugs, sexuality, mental illness, and family difficulties, and the characters’ personal growth past these challenges.

48. Baggett would later admit that she had not heard of Wallflower prior to her efforts to prevent it from being read in the School District. It appears that the book came to her attention only because it was one of the books that has been frequently targeted for removal or restriction in recent years.

49. Following Baggett’s challenge, in July 2022, a panel consisting of Northview leadership, faculty, staff, and a parent reviewed the book, discussed its use, and voted 4–3 to retain Wallflower as optional study material, noting that “[t]he concerns raised in the complaint are part of the characters’ development throughout the novel. These concerns do not outweigh the potential discussions and literary value of the novel enough to remove it” from the school. Ex. 2 at 3.

³ Plaintiffs’ claims in this action do not involve, rely on, or challenge any action taken by Defendants with respect to any classroom curricular materials, whether optional or required—including any decisions regarding the inclusion of Wallflower in the curriculum. Plaintiffs’ claims are limited solely to the removal of materials from the School District’s libraries, and/or the restriction of access to such materials within such libraries.

50. On July 28, 2022, Baggett appealed the panel’s determination with a letter to the School District’s Assistant Superintendent for Curriculum and Instruction, copying, among others, the members of the School Board, the superintendent, and the Governor of Florida. Id. at 4-7.

51. The Assistant Superintendent responded by convening a “district review committee” to review the book, as dictated by the School District’s procedures governing book challenges.

52. On or before October 4, the district review committee, consisting of two high school media specialists, two high school teachers, one high school administrator, one parent of a school student, and one community member evaluated the appeal. This included reviewing the written complaint against the book, and also reviewing materials relating to the book including lesson plans, the National Council for Teachers of English rationale, relevant state laws, the School District’s procedures, the book itself, book reviews, the novel study selection process, justification for use of outside media form, parent opt out letter for novel studies, the complainant’s appeal, and community input submitted on the media services website. After this thorough review, and meeting to discuss these materials, the district materials review committee voted 4–3 to retain Wallflower for 12th grade students, citing the same justification as had the Northview panel in July. Ex. 3.

53. Baggett then wrote letters to the School District’s superintendent, assistant superintendent, and the School Board again protesting the inclusion of Wallflower. Ex. 4. Baggett explicitly linked her effort to get Wallflower removed to removal efforts in other jurisdictions. She attached to one of her submissions an image showing a section of Plaintiff PEN America’s “Index of School Book Bans.” The image showed eight nationwide instances in which Wallflower had been removed from school libraries, classrooms, or both. Id. at 10.

54. Baggett’s October 4 letter also referenced a “parental book rating” for Wallflower and attached several excerpts from the book. Id. at 3, 5-9. Although Baggett’s letter did not state the source for the “parental book rating,” both that rating and the selected excerpts appear to have been taken directly from a report created by a website called Book Looks, which comprises hundreds of such reports about books containing material that the website’s operators consider objectionable.

55. While Book Looks disclaims affiliation with Moms for Liberty, it was founded by a member of, and uses the same rating criteria as, the Moms for Liberty chapter of Brevard County, Florida.

C. One Teacher Adopts Talking Points from National Groups to Get Books Removed from Libraries

56. On the heels of her initial efforts with respect to Wallflower, Baggett broadened her efforts to limit access to reading material considerably, focusing now on school libraries, rather than curriculum.

57. In August, while the Wallflower review process was ongoing, Baggett prepared several lists of books that she targeted for removal. She ultimately identified 116 such titles, including Wallflower. She stated that the books “should be evaluated based on explicit sexual content, graphic language, themes, vulgarity and political pushes,” noting that she had confirmed the titles were at that time available in School District libraries.

58. These titles run the gamut from picture books to teen and adult novels, and include both works of fiction and nonfiction. A substantial portion of the titles on Baggett’s lists address LGBTQ themes and/or deal with issues of race or racism.

59. Like her initial challenge to Wallflower, Baggett’s subsequent challenges drew heavily from materials that are part of the broader campaign to single out particular books for removal from libraries. For instance, in connection with her challenge to Raina Telgemeier’s book Drama, Baggett submitted a list of quotes from the book relating to one character’s identification as gay (which was the sole ground on which she objected to the book). Each quote is identical to a quote the Book Looks website had identified as objectionable. The same pattern exists for numerous other books Baggett challenged. In some instances, typos from the Book Looks website were carried over into her challenges.

60. In other instances, Baggett’s challenges employ the same language previously used as part of parallel book-removal campaigns. For instance, in her challenge to Mark Weakland’s book When Wilma Rudolph Played Basketball—a picture book about the childhood of Olympic athlete Wilma Rudolph that includes descriptions of her experiences growing up Black in the segregated South—Baggett objected that the book “opines prejudice based on race.” Ex. 5. The identical objection was included in a challenge form previously submitted in a Texas school district.

61. The bases for Baggett’s challenges are blatantly ideological. In many instances, her objections to specific books have been couched explicitly in political terms. For example, one book she challenged is Race and Policing in Modern America by Duchess Harris, a non-fiction resource guide intended for middle school readers that deals with race and policing. In her challenge, Baggett objected to the book on the sole basis that it “[p]ush[es] the idea that all police are bad + non-blacks are racist,” and claimed the purpose of the book was “[t]o race-bait.” Ex. 6. Baggett did not provide any specific examples of objectionable content, challenge any of the facts in the book, or make any allegation that the material in Race and Policing in Modern America was otherwise inappropriate for its targeted middle school audience. Her sole objection was that the book addresses a topic—the intersection of race and policing—that she did not consider suitable for discussion in schools. Baggett’s challenge to that book is still outstanding.

62. Another book Baggett has challenged is Black Girl Unlimited: The Remarkable Story of a Teenage Wizard by Echo Brown. Black Girl Unlimited is an uplifting and empowering graphic novel about a Black girl growing up under difficult circumstances who has magical powers. Baggett’s challenge to the book described it as “race-baiting,” and listed her objections as “racial bias; white grievances.” Ex. 7. Her challenge to that book is still outstanding.

63. In other instances, as detailed below, the challenges have been more subtle, as Baggett has raised concerns about sexually explicit content as a pretext for targeting books by and about people of color and LGBTQ people or otherwise on topics—such as feminism or sexual assault—that are ideologically based.

64. By early September 2022, Baggett had shared her list with School District administrators, including members of the School Board, and prepared “Request for Reconsideration of Educational Media” forms for the more than 100 books on her list.

65. As of now, the total number of books challenged in the School District—by Baggett or someone else—has reached 218.

66. The School District maintains a publicly available spreadsheet of all library books that have been challenged, which can be found here: <https://docs.google.com/spreadsheets/d/1hv6Wtu55zY3t5bmbksY2ie7Q-L3zAQdjrtFh4duLC4/edit#gid=0>.

67. The spreadsheet includes, for each challenged book, links to the original challenge form, and up-to-date information about where the challenge to the book stands, including whether access to the book is being restricted pending adjudication of the challenge.

68. Many of the challenged books were published decades ago, and have been on library shelves in the School District—and throughout the country—for years without objection or incident.

D. In Response to the Onslaught of Challenges, the School Board Changes Its Review Procedures

69. Prior to Baggett’s challenges, the School Board’s policies required that any challenged book remain on library shelves during the pendency of the review process unless and until a decision was made to remove it.⁴

70. However, in its eagerness to cater to the political objections of Baggett and others, the School Board altered the School District’s review policies. Shortly after the wave of challenges began, the then-Chair of the School Board, Kevin Adams, was quoted in local media announcing a plan to short-circuit the review process, saying that he had “asked the superintendent to quarantine or remove from circulation the challenged books until a review consistent with [an unspecified] state statute is conducted.”

71. Around the same time, the School Board’s general counsel stated that, although the School Board has the power to remove titles from School District libraries, “it cannot do so simply because it disagrees with the message of a book or it offends the personal morals of an individual.”

72. Under the new procedure, any challenged book was automatically subjected to restricted access during the pendency of the review process. Such books were physically moved in each school to the restricted access area of the library/media center. Students were then prohibited from accessing the restricted books without an “opt-in” form signed by the student’s parent allowing access to the restricted section, either for all titles or for specific individual titles. This empowered book challengers to ensure that any book they objected to for any reason would automatically be subject to restricted access.

73. Following public meetings and extensive public comment over the ensuing months, the School Board amended its policy so that not all challenged books were automatically subject to restricted access during the review process. Nonetheless, the School Board instituted two policies that continued to give challengers substantial power to restrict access to books to which they objected.

74. First, the School Board began automatically restricting access to any book where the challenge could be interpreted as alleging that the book contains content that is pornographic or prohibited under F.S. 847.012.

75. Florida Statute 847.012 prohibits the sale or distribution to minors of “harmful” material. As applied to books, it incorporates F.S. 847.001, which defines material “harmful to minors” as material that, inter alia, “[p]redominately appeals to a prurient, shameful, or morbid interest,” and “[t]aken as a whole, is without serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value for minors.” Fla. Stat., § 847.001(7)(a)-(c) (emphases added). None of the books at issue here qualify as harmful material under this standard.⁵

76. Despite this statutory language, the School Board has been using F.S. 847.012 as a pretext to restrict access to books that address other topics it finds objectionable.

77. For instance, many books that deal with the topic of sexual assault have been automatically restricted under this policy. One revealing example is The Kite Runner by PEN America member Khaled Hosseini, which is published by Plaintiff PRH. The Kite Runner follows an Afghan boy named Amir into adulthood, including his flight from Afghanistan to the United States after the 1979 Soviet invasion, and his later return to the country under the rule of the Taliban. One key scene in the novel involves Amir's failure to protect his friend from a sexual assault, and his subsequent guilt and shame over that failure. The book sold over seven million copies, spent two years on the New York Times bestseller list, and was made into a major motion picture in 2007.

78. Baggett challenged The Kite Runner based on its depiction of sexual assault, as well as unspecified "horrific language," and stated that the purpose of the book was "[i]ndoctrination." Ex. 8. On that basis, The Kite Runner was placed on restricted access pending completion of the review process. As of this date, the book does not appear to have been scheduled for committee review.

79. Another similar example of a book subject to such treatment is The God of Small Things by Arundhati Roy, which is also published by Plaintiff PRH. The God of Small Things is a novel set in Kerala, India, about young twins Rahel and Estha whose lives are upended when their mother has a secret affair with a lower-caste servant. This violation of the social order sets off a chain of events leading to the drowning of a young girl, the murder of the servant wrongly implicated in her death by the twins, and years later an incestuous encounter between the guilt-ridden twins. One pivotal scene in the book is when Estha is molested in a movie theater, and how his trauma from that event contributed to other destructive events in the family's life. Kirkus Reviews described the book as “a brilliantly constructed first novel that untangles an intricate web of sexual and caste conflict.” The God of Small Things won the prestigious Man Booker Prize in 1997.

80. Baggett challenged The God of Small Things on the grounds that it “encourages pedophilia,” “sexual abuse,” and “incest.” Ex. 9. She questioned whether it had any strengths or purpose as educational media. On that basis, The God of Small Things was placed on restricted access pending completion of the review process. As of this date, the book does not appear to have been scheduled for committee review.

81. Likewise, many books that raise feminist themes are being automatically restricted under this policy, especially to the extent that they explore such topics as the prevalence of rape and sexual assault. One such book is The Handmaid’s Tale by Margaret Atwood, which is also published by Plaintiff PRH. Handmaid’s Tale is an award-winning dystopian novel that explores the author’s criticisms of certain political and cultural elements of contemporary American society by imagining a future in which the U.S. government is overthrown by a patriarchal cult. Though the book does not, by any conceivable metric, qualify as “pornography,” or otherwise fall within F.S. 847.012, it is currently being subject to restricted access in all high schools in the School District based on Baggett’s complaint that the book contains “[g]raphic sexual depictions + language.” Ex. 10.

82. In addition, the School Board's zeal to remove or restrict access to books deemed objectionable by some members of the community has led to a number of classic works of American literature being restricted. For instance, under the School Board's policy of automatically restricting access to any book challenged on the ground that it contains content that is pornographic or prohibited under F.S. 847.012, the School Board has restricted access to (among other books): (a) Slaughterhouse-Five by Kurt Vonnegut, which is published by Plaintiff PRH, (b) Beloved by Toni Morrison, which is also published by Plaintiff PRH, and (c) Forever. . . by PEN America member Judy Blume. The School Board has done this even though none of those books could possibly be characterized as pornography or otherwise subject to F.S. 847.012.

83. Second, starting in early 2023, the School Board adopted a new (albeit not codified) practice of automatically subjecting to restricted access any book challenged on the ground that it violates Florida HB 1557, the "Parental Rights in Education Act," also commonly known as the "Don't Say Gay Bill." However, Florida HB 1557, on its face, applies only to "[c]lassroom instruction," and not to library materials. See id. § 1 (amending Fla. Stat. § 1001.42(8)(c)(3)). Indeed, the Florida State Board of Education and the Attorney General of Florida have, in other litigation, explicitly disclaimed any application of that law to library materials. See State Defendants' Second Motion to Dismiss, ECF 112, Cousins v. Grady, No. 6:22-cv-1312, at 8 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 16, 2022) (“[T]he statute regulates only ‘classroom instruction,’ not the availability of library books.”).

84. Nonetheless, as a result of this practice, challenged books that merely recognize the existence of same-sex relationships or transgender persons have been subject to restricted access for the pendency of the—often indefinite—review period.

85. For example, Plaintiff Brannen’s book Uncle Bobby’s Wedding has been subject to restricted access within elementary school libraries since it was challenged in March 2023. The picture book, which is intended for children between ages 3 and 6, contains no explicit sexual content. The sole ground of the objection is that the “Uncle Bobby” character marries another man. Ex. 11 at 2.

86. Another revealing example is Matt de la Pena’s book Milo Imagines the World, which is published by Plaintiff PRH. Milo Imagines the World is an award-winning book for young children that depicts its lead character passing the time during a long subway ride by imagining the people around him in different situations. While the challenge to the book acknowledged that it has “[c]olorful pictures and a good story line about creativity and imagination,” it objected to one image in which Milo imagines two women marrying each other. Ex. 12. On that basis, the complaint asserted that the “book contains subtle alternate sexual ideology,” and was in violation of “HB 1557/Parental Rights Law.” Id. Milo

Imagines the World is currently restricted in all elementary school libraries in the School District.

87. The barriers for students to access restricted books are significant. To access them, a student must find a librarian, ask the librarian for permission to access a book that has been designated objectionable for one reason or another—however far-fetched—and then wait while that librarian verifies that the student, in fact, has parental permission to access it. Forcing students to undertake these steps, and endure the stigma that goes along with undertaking them, is having a profound chilling effect on students seeking access to a wide range of books.

88. Of the 218 books targeted for removal in the district, 155 are restricted as of this filing, slightly more than 70%.

E. The School Board Ratifies Baggett’s Book Challenges by Removing Books

89. The process of reviewing the challenged books began in November 2022, starting with Wallflower.

90. The process included community input via online forms as well as an assessment of the book by a district review committee. This process ultimately resulted in a decision that Wallflower was appropriate for high school seniors.

91. Baggett appealed the decision, and the School Board, overruling the district review committee, voted to remove Wallflower from School District libraries.

92. Around the same time, Adams, the School Board Chair, was quoted admitting that he was largely deferring to Baggett in his assessments, saying: “I’m not gonna sit here and read 125 books. Fortunately, it don’t take long, particularly with this English teacher because she’s identified every page in there. I don’t have to read a smut book all the way from the very beginning to the very end.”

93. When a book is challenged in the School District, it first goes to a school review committee consisting of teachers, media specialists, parents, and other qualified personnel. The committee reads and re-evaluates the specific objections. In its deliberations, the school review committee considers the School District’s educational philosophy, the professional opinions of other teachers of the same subject, reputable reviews of the book, and public input. It then votes on whether to keep the book, remove it, or move it to a different grade level. The committee records its decision and the reasons for it in writing.

94. If the complainant disagrees and appeals the school review committee’s decision, the challenge goes to a district review committee.

95. The district review committees consist of media specialists, school staff, parents, and community members. As part of the review process, after an initial meeting, committees review the written complaints against the book, the books themselves, multiple secondary materials relating to the book, including book reviews and the National Council for Teachers of English explanation of the educational value of the books, multiple secondary materials as to state laws and the School District's procedures, the complainant's appeal of the school review committee decision, and community input gathered about the challenge.

96. About a month later, after reviewing these materials, the committee meets to discuss the book challenge and vote on its resolution, evaluating the following:

- whether the book is offensive;
- whether questionable elements are an important part of the story's development;
- which grade levels the book is appropriate for;
- whether the work as a whole has literary, artistic, political or scientific value for the suggested audience;
- what the overall purpose or theme of book is;
- whether concepts are presented in a manner appropriate to the ability and maturity level of the suggested audience;
- whether illustrations are appropriate for the suggested audience's developmental age;
- whether reading the book will result in a more compassionate understanding of human beings;

- whether the book offers an opportunity to understand and appreciate the aspirations, achievement, and problems of different cultures or minority groups; and
- for nonfiction books, whether the material contributes to the evolution of ideas or supports state education standards.

97. The committee documents its process and the reasons for its decision in writing. If the complainant appeals the district review committee's decision, the challenge goes before the School Board.

98. Thus far, there have been four waves of book removals by the School Board, resulting in the removal of 10 books.⁶ In each instance, the School Board voted for removal over the recommendations of the district review committee, which had deemed the book educationally suitable.

99. To date, there has not been a single instance in which the School Board has rejected a Baggett challenge.⁷

⁷ In some instances, such as with regard to When Wilma Rudolph Played Basketball by Mark Weakland, Baggett chose not to appeal the district review committee's decision to the School Board.

100. On November 1, 2022, the School Board voted to remove Wallflower from all School District libraries. As noted above, it did so despite the recommendation of the district review committee that the book be retained for 12th grade students.

101. On February 21, 2023, the School Board voted to remove three books from all School District libraries: All Boys Aren't Blue by Plaintiff Johnson, And Tango Makes Three by Peter Parnell and Justin Richardson, and When Aidan Became a Brother by Plaintiff Lukoff. Again, it did so despite the district review committee's conclusions that the books were appropriate for the grades served by the libraries in question and its recommendation, in all three cases, that the books not be removed from any libraries.

102. On March 20, 2023, the School Board voted to remove four additional books from some libraries: New Kid by Jerry Craft and Drama by Raina Telgemeier, which were removed from elementary school libraries; and The Bluest Eye by Toni Morrison and The Nowhere Girls by Amy Reed, which were removed from elementary and middle school libraries in the School District, and restricted to 11th and 12th graders within high school libraries. Once again, the School Board overrode the recommendations of the district review committee.

103. On April 13, 2023, the School Board voted to remove Push by Sapphire and Lucky by Alice Sebold from all School District libraries, again overriding the recommendation of the district review committee that the titles be made available in high school libraries.

104. In all, 10 books have so far been removed (the “Removed Books”), from some or all libraries by the School Board, while 208 additional books have been targeted for removal (the “Targeted Books”), and are currently under review.

105. A chart summarizing the School Board’s decisions as to each of the Removed Books is below:

Book	Author	Basis of Challenge⁸	District Review Committee Decision	School Board Decision
The Perks of Being a Wallflower	Stephen Chbosky	“Extreme sexual conduct descriptions; bestiality; language alert”	Keep as optional novel study for 12th grade	Removed from all libraries, including 12th grade, and may not be used as novel study
All Boys Aren’t Blue	George M. Johnson	“Extreme sexual content; violent language; disturbing scenes; LGBTQ content”	Keep in high school libraries	Removed from all libraries
And Tango Makes Three	Peter Parnell & Justin Richardson	“LGBTQ agenda using penguins”	Keep in all libraries	Removed from all libraries

⁸ The language in this column is all quoted from the challenge forms submitted by Baggett.

Book	Author	Basis of Challenge	District Review Committee Decision	School Board Decision
When Aidan Became a Brother	Kyle Lukoff	“LGBTQ introduction; not age appropriate”	Keep in all libraries	Removed from all libraries
New Kid	Jerry Craft	“Race-baiting; anti-whiteness; woke agenda”	Keep in all libraries	Removed from elementary schools; keep only in middle and high school libraries
Drama	Raina Telgemeier	“Indoctrination of LGBTQ; age-inappropriate + content not relevant”	Keep in all libraries	Removed from elementary schools; keep only in middle and high school libraries
The Bluest Eye	Toni Morrison	“Graphic rape scenes; pedophilia glorified; violent acts”	Keep in high school libraries	Removed from 9th-10th grade; keep only for 11th-12th grade
The Nowhere Girls	Amy Reed	“Graphic sexual content; sexual introductions; sexually excite”	Keep in high school libraries	Removed from 9th-10th grade; keep only for 11th-12th grade
Push	Sapphire	“Graphic sexual content”	Keep in high school libraries	Removed from all libraries
Lucky	Alice Sebold	“Graphic sexual content; violence; language”	Keep in high school libraries	Removed from all libraries

106. The School Board has not removed any additional books since April 13, 2023.

107. On May 16, 2023, the School Board voted to terminate its then-Superintendent, Tim Smith. As then-Superintendent Smith commented at the time, the Board had developed a process to deal with appeals of book challenges and had asked its general counsel whether the superintendent could himself pull controversial or challenged books from the shelves. She recommended against such a practice as contrary to the intent of the law. Mr. Smith noted that nevertheless,

You [the Board] hammer away [that] the superintendent should pull these books. Why? Because you don't want to deal with it. You get the emails, you get the phone calls, you get the chaos. But, yeah, it's easy to throw the superintendent under the bus. It's your policy that you led, and you're asking me to violate your policy. What is that?

108. On information and belief, one of the reasons for the termination was the School Board's desire to accelerate the pace at which books are removed from school libraries.

F. The School Board Has Removed Books Based on Viewpoint

109. Although the School Board's General Counsel has acknowledged that the School Board cannot order removal of books from its libraries "simply because it disagrees with the message of a book or it offends the personal morals of an individual,” it is clear that books are, in fact, being removed on such impermissible grounds.

110. The ideological bases for the removals are apparent from, inter alia: (a) the contents, characters, and themes of many of the books, (b) the nature of the asserted objections to them, (c) the fact that, in every instance, the School Board’s removal decision overrode the expert judgment of the district review committee, which had deemed the book educationally appropriate, and recommended that it be retained, and (d) the fact that there are no instances in which the School Board rejected a challenge from Baggett, despite the transparently ideological nature of her challenges. Indeed, the School Board have consistently acceded to, and ratified, Baggett’s blatantly political and message-based objections.

111. Wallflower, the book that kicked off this slate of removals is discussed in detail above. The other Removed Books exhibit the same basic pattern of targeting books based on ideological objections to their message, theme, or the identities of their characters and/or authors.

112. For instance, And Tango Makes Three (“Tango”) is a 2005 picture book based on the true story of Roy and Silo, two male penguins at the Central Park Zoo who formed a pair bond, successfully incubated an egg that another penguin couple was unable to care for, and raised the resulting baby penguin, a female named Tango, after she hatched. Tango received numerous awards. The book was listed by the American Library Association as a Notable Children’s Book in 2005 and won the ASPCA’s Henry Bergh Children’s Book Award for books promoting the humane and compassionate treatment of animals that same year.

113. Baggett’s sole listed reason for objecting to Tango was disagreement with its message. She asserted that the book was serving an “LGBTQ agenda using penguins.” Ex. 13. No basis was offered for the removal of Tango other than the mere fact that it is based on the true story of two male zoo penguins who formed a pair bond and hatched and raised a baby penguin.

114. At the School Board meeting at which Tango was addressed, School Board members made clear that they, too, believed that the mere fact that the book depicts two male penguins jointly raising a chick warranted removing it from school libraries. One School Board member observed: “The fascination is still on that it’s two male penguins raising a chick. And, most people that came up and spoke were talking about that fascination, so I’ll be voting to remove the book from our libraries.” Another School Board member stated that he would be fine with the book being available if Tango was “edited or rewritten to make it less and less of a sexual or even a romantic thing and more of the compassion and nature that nature has.”

115. Ultimately, despite the review process having deemed the book educationally suitable and recommending retaining it, the School Board sided with Baggett and removed the title from all School District libraries.

116. The grounds for removing When Aidan Became a Brother by Plaintiff Lukoff (“Aidan”) were similarly ideological. Aidan is a 2019 picture book about a young transgender boy helping his family welcome a new baby. The book has received multiple awards, including a Charlotte Huck Honor, which recognizes “outstanding children’s fiction that invites compassion, imagination, and wonder,” and the Stonewall Book Award, which is given out by the American Library Association to honor “books that have exceptional merit relating to the LGBTQIA+ experience.” Aidan is used in classrooms throughout the country.

117. In her challenge, Baggett condemned Aidan as: “LGBTQ introduction,” and “not age appropriate.” Ex. 14. No basis was offered for the removal of Aidan other than the mere fact that it is about a transgender character.

118. The district review committee recommended retaining Aidan. In addition, at the School Board meeting at which the book was addressed, one School Board member spoke in favor of retaining the book, saying: “I happen to know someone who shared with me how important this book was to her child. And, I know that I appreciate those people who keep reminding us that reading a book does not change someone. If it did, all of the hundreds of gay children out there who have to read the books that are [about] heterosexual companions, they’d all change. So I’m one of those people that think reading books opened your mind, but it doesn’t necessarily change who you are or what you are. But it makes you a more compassionate, caring person.”

119. Nonetheless, the School Board as a whole sided with Baggett, and removed the title from all School District libraries. At the meeting, the School Board chair expressed the view that, while some parents may find the perspective Aidan offers valuable, “it’s just something that should not be in the school district. We should be concentrating on the education of these students, and if I can’t fit those dots, I won’t approve the book.”

120. The grounds for removing All Boys Aren’t Blue by Plaintiff Johnson were likewise ideological. All Boys Aren’t Blue was published in 2020. It is, as the district review committee put it, a “memoir of growing up black and gay.” Ex. 15 at 3. While the book contains depictions of sex (including a sexual assault), the district review committee recognized that these depictions are critical to the story and “extremely important to understand the trajectory of [the narrator’s] life. . . . Without these moments, the memoir would not make sense.” Id. at 2. As the committee further noted, the sexual content is “clearly not intended to be arousing.” Id. at 4. The district review committee found that “[t]here are teenagers in our community who benefit from hearing [the narrator’s] experiences and perspectives,” and voted unanimously to retain it as high school library material. Id. at 3.

121. All Boys Aren't Blue has received numerous awards and recognitions. Kirkus Review named it one of the best young adult biographies/memoirs of 2020. The New York Public Library and Chicago Public Library both included it in their list of the top ten books of 2020 for young adults.

122. Baggett's challenge characterized the purpose of All Boys Aren't Blue as "indoctrination" and included "LGBTQ content" among her objections. Ex. 16. After the district review committee voted to retain the book, Baggett's appeal characterized the book as pornographic. Ex. 17. At the School Board meeting at which the book was discussed, multiple Board members characterized it as "pornographic."

123. Ultimately, despite the review committee's findings and unanimous vote in favor of retaining All Boys Aren't Blue, the School Board sided with Baggett and ordered the book removed from all libraries within the School District.

124. Another of the Removed Books is New Kid by Jerry Craft, which was part of the March 20, 2023 removals. New Kid is a Newbery Medal Award-winning graphic novel that tells the story of a 12-year-old Black boy who experiences culture shock when he enrolls at a private school. It was published in 2019. There is no sexual content of any kind in New Kid. Baggett objected to the book because, in her opinion, it involved "race-baiting," reflected "anti-whiteness," and promoted a "woke agenda." Ex. 18. Even though the book is intended for young audiences, the School Board ordered that New Kid be removed from all elementary school libraries within the School District. In doing so, it overruled the district review committee, which had voted 7-2 to keep New Kid in libraries at all levels.

125. Another Removed Book, Drama by Raina Telgemeier, was published over a decade ago, in 2012. It is a graphic novel about a seventh-grade girl who joins the stage crew for her middle school musical. She has a secret crush on one boy; a different boy has a crush on her. One character is openly gay. At the story's climax, when the female lead in the musical refuses to perform, a male character saves the show by dressing in her outfit and performing the role, including sharing a stage kiss with the male lead. As the district review committee noted, "[t]here is nothing in this work that could be considered offensive. . . . There is no sex in any part of the story." Ex. 19 at 3. Drama enjoyed wide critical praise and appeared on the American Library Association's 2013 list of Notable Children's Books.

126. Baggett objected to the book as "[i]ndoctrination of LGBTQ; age inappropriate + content not relevant." Ex. 20. She asserted that the purpose of the book to be "[i]ndoctrination." Id. Despite the district review committee voting 6–3 to retain the book in all elementary, middle, and high school libraries, the School Board ordered Drama removed from all elementary school libraries.

127. Another Removed Book is The Bluest Eye, which was Toni Morrison's first novel. It is published by Plaintiff PRH. Published over 50 years ago, The Bluest

Eye is set primarily in Morrison's Ohio hometown in 1941. It is told from the perspective of a nine-year-old Black girl. The central character, eleven-year-old Pecola, is taken in temporarily by the narrator's family. Pecola, friendless and tormented because of her chaotic home life, dark skin, and "ugliness," prays for God to give her blue eyes. Pecola is eventually raped and impregnated by her abusive father. The baby is stillborn and Pecola loses her sense of reality, believing that her wish for blue eyes has been granted. While the book received relatively little attention when it was originally published, it has since become part of the canon of American literature. In 1993, Morrison was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature for "novels characterized by visionary force and poetic import" that "give[] life to an essential aspect of American reality."

128. The Bluest Eye is frequently taught in AP Literature courses throughout the country. It is an example of the kind of narratively and thematically challenging works that students in high school are asked to navigate to become more sophisticated readers and students of literature and to prepare for post-secondary study.

129. The Bluest Eye undisputedly contains difficult and graphic content. However, as the district review committee noted, it explores "[t]he harsh truth of racism in the 1940s" and themes of "self-loathing" and "preconceived notions of beauty." Ex. 21 at 2, 3. As the committee also pointed out, "[m]any classics," including The Great Gatsby, The Sun Also Rises, and The Sound and the Fury, “deal with sexual themes.” The difference is that The Bluest Eye moves the reader’s attention “away from the implied off-stage tragedy to a sensory-oriented language from which the readers cannot look away or pretend the tragedy is not occurring or is not important. . . . The strength of Morrison’s work, which critics seem disturbed by, is that the disturbing is disturbing.” Id. at 6. The committee further noted that The Bluest Eye is the only one of Morrison’s novels “told from the viewpoint of adolescents.” Id. at 4. All five members of the committee unanimously agreed to keep the book in high school libraries.

130. Notwithstanding that the sexual content of The Bluest Eye is inextricably linked to the book’s exploration of themes of race, racism, and sexual exploitation, Baggett’s objection dismissed the book as “pedophilia glorified,” and declared that it contained no strengths as educational media and that its only purpose was “shock.” Ex. 22. Such naked hostility to a book that is widely recognized as a classic makes plain that Baggett’s real objection was to the themes the book explores, not the fact that it explores those themes (in part) by depicting sexual situations.

131. At the March 20, 2023 meeting at which the book was discussed, a School Board member noted that The Bluest Eye had been optional reading material in one district school’s International Baccalaureate program (along with Toni Morrison's most famous novel, Beloved) for nearly two decades and had never received a single parental complaint. Nonetheless, the School Board voted 3–2 to restrict the book to 11th and 12th graders. (The two dissenters would have removed the book entirely.)

132. Another of the Removed Books, The Nowhere Girls, is a 2017 novel by Amy Reed. The book is a feminist work, which concerns three misfit teenage girls who, outraged by an unpunished rape at their high school, band together to combat their school's misogynistic culture. As the district review committee noted, “[s]exual assault (rape) is an act of violence and is integral to the plot.” Ex. 23 at 2. The review committee praised the diverse personalities and backgrounds of the characters, as well as the way the novel “address[es] an important theme of activism, self-acceptance, and empowerment. It has value for any high school student.” Id. at 3. The committee unanimously agreed that the book should remain in high school libraries; one member would have kept it in middle school libraries as well.

133. As with other books she challenged, Baggett declared that The Nowhere Girls had no educational strengths. Although she purported to object to the book on the ground that its purpose is “sexual introductions; [to] sexually excite,” Ex. 24, given the profound inaptness of describing a book about rape and the social response to it in that manner, it is clear that her real objection was a disagreement with the book's feminist message. Despite the review committee's recommendation, the School Board voted 3–2 to restrict the book to 11th and 12th graders.

134. Another Removed Book is Push, the first novel by the author who goes by the pen name Sapphire, which was published by Plaintiff PRH. First published over 25 years ago, the book concerns the struggles of a 16-year-old Black girl named Precious who lives in desperate poverty and endures unspeakable abuse at the hands of both her mother and father. When the book opens, Precious is pregnant with her second child—like the first, the product of rape by her father. Precious enrolls at an alternative school where she finds a teacher who helps her learn to read and write, as well as to escape from her abusive situation and give herself and her children a chance for a better future. Stylistically, the book is told in Precious's voice and tracks her increasing English proficiency and self-esteem as she overcomes the functional illiteracy with which she begins the novel. In 2009, Push was adapted into a feature film, Precious, that was nominated for six Academy Awards and won two, including for Best Adapted Screenplay.

135. Like The Bluest Eye, Push depicts difficult and upsetting situations, sometimes in graphic terms. However, as with that novel, the district review committee noted that these elements were “an important part of developing Precious' background and creating a greater understanding of her circumstances, trials, and ultimately, her ability to begin to see herself as a whole and worthy person despite her circumstances.” Ex. 25 at 3. The committee also noted its “very artistic presentation of a journey from complete illiteracy to English language competency” and that “[t]hrough reading about Precious and her circumstances we are able to have a more developed understanding of the human condition, and hopefully a deeper compassion for someone who may be very different from ourselves.” Id. The district review committee voted 4–1 to retain Push as a high school library material.⁹

136. In her appeal of the district review committee’s decision, Baggett asserted as part of her criticism of the book that “[t]he purpose of fiction writing is simply TO ENTERTAIN. It is not to inform or educate.” Ex. 26 at 2. As with her objection to The Bluest Eye, it is apparent that Baggett’s real objection is to the book’s exploration of themes of race, racism, and sexual assault, not her purported objections to the book’s sexual content.

137. At the April 13, 2023 School Board meeting at which Push was discussed, one School Board member observed: “While I concur with the board members who’ve spoken, while I do believe that it is a story of triumph, it is a story of somebody saving themselves, someone who has resilience and discovered her self-worth, it is not a book that I believe that should be available in public high schools.” That subjective reaction carried the day, and the School Board voted to overrule the district review committee and remove Push from School District high school libraries.¹⁰

138. The ideological nature of these book removals is further underscored by what books have not been removed.

139. Even though a number of books have been removed simply because they allude to, or acknowledge the existence of, same-sex relationships and/or transgender persons, there have not been any instances in which a book has been removed simply because it alludes to, or recognizes the existence of, heterosexual relationships or cis gendered persons. For instance, among the children’s books that remain unchallenged on elementary school shelves in the School District are Just Me and My Little Brother by Mercer Mayer and The Wedding by Eve Bunting, each of which depicts heterosexual relationships and/or cis gendered persons in family settings similar to those in which Tango and Aidan present same-sex relationships and transgender persons.

¹⁰ Included in the appeal record considered by the School Board was a set of “Relevant Florida State Statutes,” among which was HB 1557. HB 1557 does not apply to library materials, and, accordingly, does not provide a basis to restrict or remove any title.

140. Likewise, even though many books addressing themes related to race, racism, feminism, and/or sexual assault have been removed on the ostensible grounds that they contain sexually explicit content, there are numerous books that remain in School District libraries that are also sexual explicit, but were not singled out for removal because they do not address such themes. For instance, the following books, each of which contains sexually explicit content and/or language, remain, unchallenged, in high school libraries in the School District: 1984 by George Orwell, Brave New World by Aldous Huxley, The Catcher in the Rye by J.D. Salinger, Flowers in the Attic by V.C. Andrews, The World According to Garp by John Irving, Catch-22 by Joseph Heller, Madame Bovary by Gustave Flaubert, A Farewell to Arms by Ernest Hemingway, and the complete works of William Shakespeare.

141. To be clear, Plaintiffs do not believe that any of the books referenced in the preceding paragraph should be removed from high school libraries. Nonetheless, that not one of those has been removed, or targeted for removal, makes plain that, for the books the School Board has removed, it is not the sexual content per se that is driving the objections.

G. The School Board Is Also Indefinitely Restricting Access to Books Based on Viewpoint

142. It is also apparent that books are being subject to restricted access for indefinite periods of time on ideological, not pedagogical, grounds.

143. Indeed, as detailed above, the School Board amended its procedures for challenged books so as to make it easier to restrict access to books that are subject to ideological objections.

144. The School Board did this in two ways. First, under the School Board’s policies (at least as they existed prior to July 1, 2023), books were being subject to restricted access pending further review simply because they reference the existence of same-sex relationships or transgender persons, without regard to anything else about their content. Second, under those policies, citizens who objected to books on ideological or political grounds were able to restrict access to those books simply by opportunistically highlighting the fact that—like plenty of other books that remain unchallenged on library shelves—they contain some sexual content.

145. For instance, one of the Targeted Books is Uncle Bobby’s Wedding by Plaintiff Brannen. Uncle Bobby’s Wedding is a picture book about the wedding of the narrator’s “Uncle Bobby” to his boyfriend Jamie. The book has received numerous awards, including being recognized as one of the “Best Books of the Year” by both Kirkus Reviews and Bank Street in 2020, and being identified as one of the 100 Best Children’s Books of the Past 100 Years by Booktrust. Uncle Bobby’s Wedding is used in classrooms throughout the country.

146. The sole basis on which Uncle Bobby's Wedding's was challenged was that it “contains alternate sexual ideologies, a violation of HB 1557/Parental Rights Law and is prohibited to be available to K-3.” Ex. 11 at 2. The complaint objected in particular to one picture showing “Uncle Bobby and Jamie hold[ing] hands while announcing their marriage to everyone.” Id. at 3. There is no sexual content in the book.

147. On the basis of this challenge, access to Uncle Bobby's Wedding is currently restricted within elementary school libraries in the School District. The book does not appear to have been scheduled for committee review.

148. Another Targeted Book is Too Bright to See, a novel by Plaintiff Lukoff, published by Plaintiff PRH. Too Bright to See is intended for students in grades 4–7. The book involves two friends (Bug and Moira), and the ghost that haunts Bug's house, as Bug realizes over the course of the story he is a transgender boy. Too Bright to See was one of five children's books selected in 2022 as a Newbery Honor Book, and one of five selected as a finalist for the 2022 National Book Award for Young People's Literature.

149. As with Uncle Bobby's Wedding, the sole stated objection to Too Bright to See is that the book “contains sexualities and alternate gender identities, a violation of HB 1557 and Parental Rights Law,” and the claimed purpose of the book is “indoctrination.” Ex. 27. There is no claim that the book contains any explicit material. On the basis of this challenge, access to Too Bright to See is currently restricted within elementary school libraries in the School District. The book does not appear to have been scheduled for committee review.

150. Another Targeted Book is Two Boys Kissing, a young adult novel by Plaintiff Levithan, published by Plaintiff PRH. The title characters in Two Boys Kissing are two teenage boys who, in protest of a homophobic attack on another character, attempt to break the record for the world's longest kiss. The book also includes other gay or transgender characters in various situations related to the main story, as well as a metafictional "Greek chorus" made up of gay men who died during the worst years of the AIDS crisis, who comment on the story, the characters, and the momentous changes in society's acceptance of gay people between the 1980s and the book's 2010s setting. Two Boys Kissing has received multiple awards, including a Stonewall Honor, and the Lambda Literary Award, and was placed on the longlist for the 2013 National Book Awards.

151. Baggett's objections to Two Boys Kissing include "LGBTQ push/indoctrination." Ex. 28. She also listed "indoctrination" as the book's purpose. Id. On the basis of this challenge, access to Two Boys Kissing is currently restricted within high school libraries in the School District, where it was previously generally available. The book does not appear to have been scheduled for committee review.

152. Another Targeted Book is Out of Darkness by Plaintiff Pérez. Out of Darkness is a historical young adult novel involving a secret romance between a Mexican-American girl and a Black boy in a small town in East Texas in the 1930s, in the months preceding a catastrophic real-life gas explosion that destroyed the town's school and killed hundreds of students and faculty. The story ends violently and tragically.

153. Booklist named Out of Darkness one of its “50 Best YA Books of All Time” in 2017, saying “Pérez’s elegant and devastating Printz Honor winner begins with a real-life 1937 school explosion that killed 300 people in Texas before backtracking to Mexican American Naomi, who struggles with racism, love, and Henry—the father of her siblings and one of the most vivid, complicated villains in YA history.” In 2015, the book was named as one of the “Best Teen” books of the year by Kirkus Reviews, and one of the “Best Books of 2015” by School Library Journal magazine.

154. Although the book’s depictions of sexual situations are central to the story it tells, Baggett objected to Out of Darkness on the ground that it includes “graphic depictions of abuse + sexual scenes.” She listed the strengths of the book as “none,” and listed its purpose as “sexual introductions; sexually excite.” Ex. 29. The book is currently being restricted within high school libraries in the School District, where it was previously generally available, and does not appear to be scheduled for committee review.

155. Another Targeted Book is Beyond Magenta: Transgender Teens Speak Out (“Beyond Magenta”) by PEN America member Susan Kuklin. Beyond Magenta is a young adult nonfiction book based on interviews with six transgender or nonbinary teenagers. Beyond Magenta received numerous awards and positive reviews from Booklist, Kirkus Reviews, and Publishers Weekly, with the latter calling it “a sorely needed resource for teens and, frankly, many adults” that captures its subjects as “full, complex, and imperfect human beings.”

156. Baggett challenged Beyond Magenta on the grounds that it was “sexually explicit” and contained “LGBTQIA content.” Ex. 30. She claimed it had no strengths as educational media and its sole purpose was “total indoctrination.” Access to Beyond Magenta is being restricted in middle school and high school libraries in the School District, where it was previously generally available, and the book does not yet appear to have been scheduled for committee review.

157. Another targeted book is The Freedom Writers Diary: How a Teacher and 150 Teens Used Writing to Change Themselves and the World Around Them by Erin Gruwell. The Freedom Writers Diary, which is published by Plaintiff PRH, is a non-fiction book that collects diary entries from the largely minority students at the “at risk” high school where the book’s main author, Gruwell, taught. Modeled after The Diary of Anne Frank and Zlata's Diary: A Child's Life in Sarajevo, the diary entries draw parallels between those books and the students' lives and chronicle their challenges dealing with issues like gang violence, racism, getting evicted, and drug and alcohol abuse, and the students' efforts to rise above them.

158. In her challenge, Baggett asserted that the purpose of the book was to “incite racial division,” and objected to the book as having “extremely sexual content; nudity; alternative sexualities; profanity; child abuse; molestation; [and] racial slurs.” Ex. 31. On the basis of that challenge, the book is currently being restricted within middle school and high school libraries in the School District (where it was previously generally available), and does not appear to be scheduled for committee review.

159. Another targeted book is Concrete Rose by Angie Thomas. Concrete Rose is a prequel to Thomas's acclaimed 2017 book The Hate U Give, and tells the backstory of Maverick (“Mav”), the father of the main character in The Hate U Give. In the book, Mav must navigate competing pressures—dealing with gang culture as the son of one of the gang's leaders who is incarcerated, fathering a child out of wedlock, and falling in love with his girlfriend and planning a future together. As described in Publishers Weekly, “Through its portrayal of loss and upheaval, this story acts as a tender love letter to a close Black family and community—one that isn't without problems but is always full of love.” Kirkus Reviews named it as one of the best young adult novels of 2021, and it was a Michael L. Printz Honor book, awarded for excellence in young adult literature.

160. Baggett challenged Concrete Rose on the basis that it includes “sexual activities,” “excessive and frequent profanity” and “controversial racial and social commentary.” Among the passages she objected to were one in which a character described his disengagement with a history class that lionizes white people who had done problematic things, like the notion that Columbus “discover[ed]” America, a place where people already lived. Another objected-to passage was about the character’s hatred of his coach who had a Confederate flag on his truck and implied that he was the coach’s slave. Ex. 32. A third passage described a sexual encounter between Mav and his girlfriend. On the basis of Baggett’s challenge, the book is currently restricted within high school and middle school libraries in the School District (where it was previously generally available), and does not appear to be scheduled for committee review.

H. Defendant Has Disproportionately Targeted Books by Minority and LGBTQ Authors or Books Addressing Themes Involving Race and LGBTQ Identity

161. The removal efforts of the School Board have been focused disproportionately on minority and LGBTQ authors and/or books that pursue themes related to minority or LGBTQ identity.

162. Of the 10 books permanently removed from one or more libraries by the School Board, 6 have authors who are non-white and/or identify as LGBTQ, while 9 address themes relating to race or LGBTQ identity, or feature prominent non-white and/or LGBTQ characters.

163. In addition, relative to their presence in School District libraries as a whole, the books that have been subjected to restricted access, or at least targeted for potential removal, have disproportionately been books with non-white and/or LGBTQ authors, or which address themes relating to race or LGBTQ identity, or feature prominent non-white and/or LGBTQ characters.

164. For example, of the 218 books that have been targeted for removal, approximately 40% have authors who are non-white and/or identify as LGBTQ, while approximately 60% address themes relating to race or LGBTQ identity.

165. And, of the 171 books that have either been removed or restricted, approximately 40% have authors who are non-white and/or identify as LGBTQ, while approximately 60% address themes relating to race or LGBTQ identity, or feature prominent non-white and/or LGBTQ characters.

166. The disproportionate focus of the removal and restriction efforts is not an accident. Baggett and other challengers have routinely expressed the categorical view that a book is inappropriate for inclusion in a school library simply because it explores themes relating to race or LGBTQ identity. And, the School Board has repeatedly ratified—over the objections of the district review committee—Baggett’s removal preferences.

167. In addition, all or most books singled out for removal because they reference same-sex relationships or transgender people are being automatically placed under restriction during the review period.

168. As a consequence of this targeting of books by non-white and LGBTQ authors, authors belonging to such groups are disproportionately hindered in their ability to reach young audiences, including non-white and LGBTQ students.

169. In addition, as a consequence of this disproportionate targeting of books by non-white and LGBTQ authors and/or books that pursue themes related to minority or LGBTQ identity, students in the School District who are non-white and/or identify as LGBTQ are being deprived of access to books of special interest to them and their experiences.

I. Students in the School District Are Being Deprived Access, or Restricted in Their Access, to Books to which They Previously Had Access

170. The book removals and restrictions enacted by the School Board are denying students access to books they would like to read or chilling such access.

171. For example, Plaintiff Durtschi is the parent of two students who currently attend A.K. Suter Elementary School, which is in the School District. The students are entering the fourth and second grades. Both of Plaintiff Durtschi’s children go to their school library at least once a week, where they check out books.

172. Durtschi's rising fourth-grader would like to access and check out books that are no longer available in her school's library because of the book removals and restrictions. In particular, she would like to access and check out Too Bright to See, Drama, and New Kid. Each of those books is currently unavailable or restricted in her school library as a result of the actions of the School Board.

173. Durtschi's rising second-grader would also like to access and check out books that are no longer available in her school's library because of the book removals and book restrictions. In particular, she would like to access and check out Tango, Aidan, and Uncle Bobby's Wedding. Each of those books is currently unavailable or restricted in her school library as a result of the actions of the School Board.

174. Durtschi herself would like those particular books, and others like them, to be available to her children in their school library. It is very important to her that her children have opportunities to be exposed to points of view, backgrounds, and experiences different from their own and attend a school in which children have opportunities to be exposed to points of view, backgrounds, and experiences different from their own. She believes such exposure is critical for preparing them for participation in our wider society.

175. Durtschi expressed these views at the School Board meeting at which it was decided that Plaintiff's Johnson's book All Boys Aren't Blue would be removed. She stated: “George Johnson has said that works like mine have saved their lives. I’m the parent of two little girls at A.K. Suter Elementary. . . . Each book brought for appeal this evening has been challenged on the basis of LGBTQ indoctrination and content, but storytelling is not indoctrination. Indoctrination means teach[ing] someone to accept a set of beliefs without questioning them. By not allowing our children to consume the entire world around them in and out of the classroom we aren’t allowing them to question much of anything. I want my girls to question intolerance. I want my girls to question bigotry and misogyny. I want to prepare them to be loving, kind, and empathetic friends. I know many have said our children already receive so much information in the real world. Well that’s all the more reason to increase positive discussion regarding otherwise taboo topics.”

176. Plaintiff Glass is the parent of a rising eighth-grader at Ferry Pass Middle School. His daughter visits the library at her school. She is particularly interested in books about coming of age and that deal with some of the issues she faces as a teenager.

177. Glass’s daughter would like to access and check out books that are no longer available in her school’s library because of the book removals and restrictions. In particular, she would like to check out The Nowhere Girls and The Freedom Writers Diary. Each of those books is currently unavailable or restricted in her school library as a result of the actions of the School Board.

178. Glass himself would like those particular books, and other books like them, to be available to his daughter in her school library. It is important to him that his daughter has opportunities to be learn about the dangers of sexual assault and the importance of consent so that she is prepared for situations she may encounter in middle school or high school. He further sees value in her reading about the intersection between stories about minority communities and stories involving sexual assault so that she will appreciate the unique challenges that people from other backgrounds face. He believes that learning about relationships and sexuality is critical for his daughter's development as a teenage girl.

179. Plaintiff Novakowski is the parent of a rising first-grader at A.K. Suter Elementary School. Her daughter visits the library at her school at least once a week and routinely checks out books. Her daughter is particularly interested in books about families and different family arrangements.

180. Novakowski's daughter would like to access and check out books that are no longer available in her school's library because of the book removals and restrictions. In particular, she would like to check out Tango, Aidan, and Uncle Bobby's Wedding. Each of those books is currently unavailable or restricted in her school library as a result of the actions of the School Board.

181. Novakowski herself would like those particular books, and other books like them, to be available to her daughter in her school library. It is important to her that her daughter has opportunities to be exposed to points of view, backgrounds, and experiences different from her own and that of her family. She believes such exposure is critical to learning acceptance of people with different backgrounds and experiences and to being able to participate in our wider society.

182. Plaintiff Parker is the parent of a rising eighth-grader at Beulah Middle School. His son visits the library at his school and checks out books. His son is particularly interested in books about technology, gaming, and computers, as well as books about civil rights.

183. Parker's son would like to access and check out books that are no longer available in his school's library because of the book removals and restrictions. In particular, he would like to check out The Freedom Writers Diary and Concrete Rose. Each of those books is currently unavailable or restricted in his school library as a result of the actions of the School Board.

184. Parker himself would like those particular books, and other books like them, to be available to his son in his school library. It is important to him that his son have opportunities to be exposed to books that reflect Black culture, including works by celebrated Black authors, and not to shy away from stories reflecting the raw experiences that Black people face. He believes such exposure is critical for his son to develop resilience.

185. Plaintiff Roy is the parent of a rising fifth grader at Scenic Heights Middle School and a rising ninth grader at West Florida High School. Her children visit the library at their school regularly and check out books. Her fifth grade son is particularly interested in nonfiction books, largely history and science. Her ninth grade daughter is particularly interested in popular fiction, including books about teenagers, friendships, and social dynamics at school.

186. Roy's children would like to access and check out books that are no longer available in their school libraries because of the book removals and restrictions. In particular, her son would like to check out New Kid and Too Bright to See. Her daughter would like to check out The Kite Runner, The God of Small Things, All Boys Aren't Blue, and The Perks of Being a Wallflower. Each of those books is currently unavailable or restricted in their school library as a result of the actions of the School Board.

187. Roy herself would like those particular books, and other books like them, to be available to her children in their school library. It is important to her that her children be exposed to books with which they can identify, including books about being a racial minority at a school where their peers come from very different backgrounds. She is especially interested in exposing them to books about South Asian culture because the children's family members on their father's side are South Asian Muslim immigrants and she wants them to understand their culture. In addition, she thinks it vital that her children to have access to books where young people tackle difficult issues, including their own sexuality, drugs, and even abuse, so that her children can learn how to develop resilience themselves in the face of challenges. Roy also wants her children to have access to books on these topics that trained educators and media specialists have identified as adding value to school libraries.

188. Roy is alarmed by the School Board's removal and restriction of books from Escambia County public school libraries based on objections to the ideas presented in those books, as she associates that type of censorship with authoritarian governments. She and her family previously lived in Myanmar, whose repressive government broadly censors speech and ideas. She was thankful to move back to the United States where censorship should not be an issue.

189. Plaintiff Satterwhite is the parent of a rising tenth grader at Pensacola High School. His son visits the library at his school and is particularly interested in graphic novels and books about race and racism.

190. This coming school year, Satterwhite's son would like to access and check out books that are no longer available in his school's library because of the book removals and restrictions. In particular, he would like to check out Slaughterhouse Five and All Boys Aren't Blue. Each of those books is currently unavailable or restricted in his school library as a result of the actions of the School Board.

191. Satterwhite himself would like those particular books, and other books like them, to be available to his son in his school library. It is important to him that his son has opportunities to read about Black experiences in the United States, in part because his own family felt the need to dissociate themselves from their Black heritage. Beyond that, he wants books to be available to his son in the school library for him to explore Black experiences and any other subjects he is interested in at his own pace and driven by his own interests.

192. Plaintiff Smith is the parent of two rising twelfth graders at Pine Forest High School. Her daughters visit the library at their school and check out books. Her daughters are particularly interested in books written by Black authors and about Black culture and history because they feel they can relate to those topics and are excited to learn about them.

193. Smith's daughters would like to access and check out books that are no longer available in their school's library because of the book removals and restrictions. In particular, they would like to check out Push, The Freedom Writers Diary, Beloved, and The Handmaid's Tale. Each of those books is currently unavailable or restricted in their school library as a result of the actions of the School Board.

194. Smith herself would like those particular books, and other books like them, to be available to her daughters in their school library. It is important to her that her daughters have opportunities to be exposed to books that reflect Black culture, including works by celebrated Black authors, and not to shy away from stories reflecting the raw experiences that Black people and women face. She believes such exposure is critical for them to develop resilience.

J. Defendant’s Book Removals and Restrictions Harm PEN America, Its Members, the Author Plaintiffs, PRH, and the Parent Plaintiffs and Their Children

195. Plaintiff PEN America has standing to sue to enjoin the Defendants’ book removals and restrictions because the actions of the School Board have caused direct organizational injury to PEN America.

196. As a consequence of efforts in Escambia County and elsewhere to remove books from public school libraries based on political or ideological objections, PEN America has had to reallocate significant financial resources and time to addressing this issue and away from other priorities. For example, PEN America has had to hire full-time staff to work solely on (a) tracking and reporting on book removals, (b) supporting author-members who have concerns about what is happening to their own books, and (c) responding to a consistent onslaught of inquiries and notifications from parents, teachers, students and media concerned about the situation regarding book removals and looking to PEN America for insight and guidance. In addition, because of the focus on book removals, PEN America has had fewer personnel dedicated to free speech education for youth or to free speech issues on college campuses, two other areas related to education on which PEN America has typically focused its resources.

197. PEN America also has associational standing on behalf of its members. Among the PEN America members whose books have been removed from libraries within the School District and/or subjected to restricted access within libraries in the School District are each of the Author Plaintiffs, as well as Margaret Atwood, Judy Blume, Alex Gino, John Green, Khaled Hosseini, Susan Kuklin, and Jodi Picoult.

198. Each of those affected author-members of PEN America would have standing to sue based on the School District's violation of their rights under the First and Fourteenth Amendments.

199. The interests at stake in this case are germane to PEN America's purpose of protecting the rights of its author-members and the right to free expression generally.

200. Neither the claims asserted nor the relief requested in this case requires the participation of the named non-plaintiff author-members above or any other of PEN America's author-members as the relief being sought is declaratory and injunctive in nature.

201. The Author Plaintiffs have standing to sue to enjoin Defendants' book removals and restrictions because their books have been (a) removed from libraries within the School District, and/or (b) subject to restricted access of an indefinite period pending adjudication of a challenge. Specifically:

- a. Plaintiff Brannen's book Uncle Bobby's Wedding is one of the Targeted Books and currently restricted from School District elementary libraries indefinitely pending an as-yet unscheduled review.
 - b. Plaintiff Johnson's book All Boys Aren't Blue is one of the Removed Books.
 - c. Plaintiff Levithan's book Two Boys Kissing is one of the Targeted Books and currently restricted from School District libraries indefinitely pending an as-yet unscheduled review.
 - d. Plaintiff Lukoff's book Aidan is one of the Removed Books. His book Too Bright to See is one of the Targeted Books and is currently restricted from School District elementary libraries indefinitely pending an as-yet unscheduled review.
 - e. Plaintiff Pérez's book Out of Darkness is one of the Targeted Books and currently restricted from School District libraries indefinitely pending an as-yet unscheduled review.
202. Millions of books published by PRH are sold into Florida each year, including to school districts and public libraries. PRH has standing to sue to enjoin Defendants' book removal and restrictions because certain of the books it publishes, including books by Toni Morrison, Kurt Vonnegut, Kyle Lukoff, Sapphire, and David Levithan, have been (a) removed from libraries within the School District, and/or (b) subject to restricted access of an indefinite period pending adjudication of a challenge. A publisher's ability to publish and sell books freely is affected when state or local officials restrict circulation or remove the publisher's books.

203. The Parent Plaintiffs have standing, on behalf of both themselves and their children, to sue to enjoin Defendants' book removals and restrictions because both they and their children have been harmed by the book removals and restrictions.

204. Plaintiff Durtschi is the parent of two students who attend A.K. Suter Elementary School in the School District. As a result of the actions of the School Board, Durtschi's daughters are unable to access books in their school library that were previously available. Durtschi's daughters want to access and check out those books and Durtschi wants them to have that opportunity.

205. Plaintiff Glass is the parent of a student who attends Ferry Pass Middle School in the School District. As a result of the actions of the School Board, Glass's daughter is unable to access books in her school library that were previously available. Glass's daughter wants to access and check out those books and Glass wants her to have that opportunity.

206. Plaintiff Novakowski is the parent of a student who attends A.K. Suter Elementary School in the School District. As a result of the actions of the School Board, Novakowski's daughter is unable to access books in her school library that were previously available. Novakowski's daughter wants to access and check out those books and Novakowski wants her to have that opportunity.

207. Plaintiff Parker is the parent of a student who attends Beulah Middle school in the School District. As a result of the actions of the School Board, Parker's son is unable to access books in his school library that were previously available. Parker's son wants to access and check out those books, and Parker wants him to have that opportunity.

208. Plaintiff Roy is the parent of a student who attends Scenic Heights Elementary School and a student who attends West Florida High School in the School District. As a result of the actions of the School Board, Roy's children are unable to access books their school library that were previously available. Roy's children want to access and check out those books, and Roy wants them to have that opportunity.

209. Plaintiff Satterwhite is the parent of a student who attends Pensacola High School in the School District. As a result of the actions of the School Board, Satterwhite's son is unable to access books in his school library that were previously available. Satterwhite's son wants to access and check out those books and Satterwhite wants him to have that opportunity.

210. Plaintiff Smith is the parent of two students who attend Pine Forest High School in the School District. As a result of the actions of the School Board, Smith's daughters are unable to access books in their school library that were previously available. Smith's daughters want to access and check out those books and Smith wants them to have that opportunity.

K. The School Board Adopts New Policies Purportedly Based on HB 1069

211. Following Plaintiffs' filing of this lawsuit, the School Board amended its policies relating to challenges to library books in response to HB 1069, through which the Florida legislature amended FS 1006.28.

212. The amended FS 1006.28, which went into effect on July 1, 2023, provides that any material available in a school or classroom library that qualifies as "pornographic" under Florida law, or that "depicts or describes sexual conduct" as defined by Florida law, is subject to challenge. The statute further prescribes procedures for adjudicating challenges to such materials, which require, inter alia, that any challenged book must be removed from circulation within 5 days and remain so during the pendency of the challenge. The amendments mandated by HB 1069 do not allow parents to opt in to allowing their children to access the challenged books.

213. On June 20, 2023, the School Board announced it had taken emergency action to adopt a revised School Board Rule 4.06, which purports to codify the changes enacted by HB 1069.

214. At the time of this filing, it is not clear what materials will be challenged and removed under the revised School Board Rule 4.06, or how the rule will be put into practice.¹¹ Regardless, the restrictions and removals that commenced prior to July 1, 2023 are constitutionally impermissible for the reasons set forth herein.

V. CLAIMS FOR RELIEF

COUNT ONE:

FIRST AMENDMENT—VIEWPOINT DISCRIMINATION (On Behalf of PEN America, Its Members, the Author Plaintiffs and PRH)

215. The foregoing paragraphs are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein.

216. The Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution incorporates the protections of the First Amendment as applied to and binding on the State of Florida.

217. The School Board is a state actor operating under color of state law.

¹¹ Depending on how enforcement of the revised School Board Rule 4.06 unfolds, Plaintiffs may seek to further amend the complaint, or otherwise file a challenge to the statute that the rule seeks to codify. In the meantime, their challenge to the removals and restrictions encompassed in the amended complaint remains ripe for review.

218. The libraries within the School District constitute, at a minimum, non-public forums. Because they are non-public forums, the School Board cannot remove an author's or publisher's book from school libraries, or relegate it to restricted sections of such libraries, based on viewpoint discrimination.

219. However, as detailed above with respect to the Removed Books, the School Board has been ordering books removed based on ideological objections to their contents or disagreement with their messages or themes, rather than for pedagogical reasons.

220. The School Board is likewise restricting access to books for indefinite periods of time based on ideological objections to their contents or disagreement with their messages.

221. The result is that the School Board is systematically excluding certain viewpoints and perspectives from school libraries.

222. Such removals, threatened removals, and restrictions of access constitute viewpoint discrimination in violation of the First Amendment.

COUNT TWO:
FIRST AMENDMENT—RIGHT TO RECEIVE INFORMATION
(On Behalf of the Parent Plaintiffs and Their Minor Children)

223. The Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution incorporates the protections of the First Amendment as applied to and binding on the State of Florida.

224. The School Board is a state actor operating under color of state law.

225. In the setting of a public school library, the First Amendment “protects the right to receive information and ideas.” Pico, 457 U.S. at 867-68. This right is violated when a school district or school board removes or restricts access to library books “in a narrowly partisan or political manner,” and for the purpose of “deny[ing] students access to ideas with which” the school district or school board disagrees. Id. at 870-71 (emphasis added). It is likewise violated when books are removed for reasons other than legitimate pedagogical concerns. As detailed above, that is what has occurred here.

226. The Parent Plaintiffs want their student children to have access to some or all of the Removed Books.

227. The Parent Plaintiffs also want their student children to be able to access some or all of the Targeted Books without incurring the stigma of having to identify themselves as wishing to access material that has been falsely labelled as “pornographic” or otherwise deemed unsuitable for school.

228. The students on whose behalf the Parent Plaintiffs also bring this lawsuit likewise want to have access to some or all of the Removed Books.

229. The students on whose behalf the Parent Plaintiffs also bring this lawsuit likewise want to be able to access some or all of the Targeted Books without incurring the stigma of having to identify themselves as wishing to access material that has been falsely labelled as “pornographic” or otherwise deemed unsuitable for school.

230. The unlawful conduct of the School Board has injured the rights of the Parent Plaintiffs that their student children have access to information and ideas within school libraries, and the rights of those student children to receive information and ideas.

COUNT THREE:
FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT—EQUAL PROTECTION
(On Behalf of PEN America, Its Members, the Author Plaintiffs, and the Parent Plaintiffs and Their Minor Children)

231. The foregoing paragraphs are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein.

232. The Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution constrains the ability of state actors, including the School Board, from discriminating on the basis of race, gender, or sexual orientation. This includes taking official action motivated by discriminatory animus based on race, gender, or sexual orientation.

233. The School Board is a state actor operating under color of state law.

234. As set forth above, the books that have been removed, or targeted for removal, by the School Board are disproportionately books authored by non-white and/or LGBTQ authors, and/or books that explore themes relating to race, gender, or sexual orientation.

235. That disproportionate focus is evidence that the School Board is targeting books and/or authors based on prohibited animus.

236. In addition, such prohibited animus is manifest on the face of the objections leveled against the Removed Books and Targeted Books. Many of these books have been targeted simply because they address themes relating to race, sexuality, or gender identity. The clear intent is to exclude speech by authors based on their race, sexuality, or gender identity.

237. The School Board has consistently acceded to, and ratified, that animus in its book-removal and book-restriction decisions.

238. As a result of that discriminatory animus, non-white and/or LGBTQ authors are having their books removed and/or restricted on discriminatory grounds.

239. As a further result of that discriminatory animus, non-white and/or LGBTQ students are being denied access to books that reflect their identities and experiences on discriminatory grounds.

240. Such conduct violates the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

VI. PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, in light of the foregoing facts, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Court:

- A. Issue preliminary and permanent injunctive relief requiring the School Board and its agents, employees, and successors in office to restore to the libraries within the School District the Removed Books, consistent with the recommendations of the District Review Committees.

B. Issue preliminary and permanent injunctive relief requiring the School Board and its agents, employees, and successors to restore the Targeted Books currently subjected to restricted access to their previous status;

C. Award Plaintiffs' costs of suit and reasonable attorneys' fees and other expenses under 42 U.S.C. § 1988; and

D. Grant such other and further relief as the interests of justice may require.

Respectfully submitted,

Educational Media Materials

The Board has the constitutional duty and responsibility to select and provide adequate instructional materials for all students in accordance with F.S. 1006.28 and 1006.283. For core subject areas, the Board must either (1) adopt instructional materials selected from the State-approved materials according to the state adoption cycles, (2) adopt instructional materials pursuant to a (local) Board instructional materials review program prescribed by this policy, or (3) a combination of both. Core subject areas are mathematics, language arts, science, social studies, reading, and literature for kindergarten through grade 12.

The Board is responsible for the content of all instructional materials and any other materials used in a classroom, made available in a school library/media center, classroom library, or included on a reading list whether adopted and purchased from the state-adopted instructional materials list, adopted and purchased through the District instructional materials program or otherwise purchased or made available in the classroom.

Instructional materials and resources shall be provided in a variety of formats that are appropriate, timely, and essential to the attainment of specified educational objectives and are free of bias, stereotypes, distortions, and prejudices.

This policy provides a parent or resident the opportunity to proffer evidence to the district school board that:

- A. An instructional material does not meet the criteria of F.S. 1006.31(2) or 1006.40(3)(d) if it was selected for use in a course or otherwise made available to students in the school district but was not subject to the public notice, review, comment, and hearing procedures under F.S. 1006.283(2)(b)8., 9., and 11.
- B. Any material used in a classroom, made available in a school library, classroom library, or included on a reading list that contains content that is pornographic or prohibited under F.S. 847.012, is not suited to student needs and their ability to comprehend the material presented, or is inappropriate for the grade level and age group for which the material is used. Materials found to violate these criteria will be discontinued for any grade level or age group for which such use is inappropriate or unsuitable.

7/21/23, 10:45 AM

1. Definition of Instructional Materials

F.S. 1006.29(2) defines the terms "instructional materials" as items having intellectual content that by design serve as a major tool for assisting in the instruction of a subject or course. These items may be available in bound, unbound, kit, or package form and may consist of hardbacked or soft backed textbooks, electronic content, consumables, learning laboratories, manipulatives, electronic media, and computer courseware or software. Pursuant to F.S. 1006.28(1)(a)(1), "adequate instructional materials" means a sufficient number of student or site licenses or sets of materials.

2. Use of Instructional Materials

- A. Each school shall purchase sufficient current instructional materials to provide each student with a textbook or other instructional materials as a major tool of instruction in core courses in mathematics, language arts, science, social studies, reading, and literature for kindergarten through grade 12 except for instruction approved by the School Advisory Council that does not include a textbook as a major tool of instruction. Such purchase must be made within the first three (3) years of the effective date of the adoption cycle.

Principals are also responsible for overseeing compliance with school district procedures for selecting school library/media center materials and classroom libraries at the school to which they are assigned. Use of materials must adhere to the "fair use" doctrine permitting the use of copyrighted works for instructional purposes.
(See <https://www.copyright.gov/help/faq/>)

- B. Allocations shall be made to individual schools on an equitable basis. Up to fifty (50) percent of the annual allocation may be used for the purchase of instructional materials, including library and reference books and non-print materials, not including the District-adopted list, and for the repair and renovation of textbooks and library books.
- C. Principals shall communicate to parents/guardians the manner in which instructional materials are used to implement the curricular activities of the school and how instructional materials funds are allocated and spent.
- D. Schools shall notify parents/guardians of their student's ability to access their instructional materials through the district's local instructional improvement system and/or website. This notification will be displayed prominently on the school's website and will be provided annually in written format to all parents/guardians of enrolled students.

3. Adoptions of Core Subject Instructional Materials

Each school year, no later than March 15th, a district subject area Instructional Materials Review Committee shall be established for recommending instructional materials from the state adopted list or materials from appropriate publishers to be included on the District adopted textbook list for purchase by district schools. All materials used to teach reproductive health or any disease, including HIV/AIDS, its symptoms, development and treatment must be approved by the Florida Department of Education.

No school shall participate in a pilot program of instructional materials under consideration for adoption during the eighteen (18) months prior to state adoption or for the first two (2) years after official adoption of materials.

4. Instructional Materials Adoption Procedure

A. Instructional Materials Review Committee Membership

1. The Instructional Materials Review Committee shall be composed of persons actively engaged in teaching or in the supervision of teaching in the public elementary, middle, or high schools and shall represent the major fields and levels in which instructional materials are used in the public schools. In addition, the Instructional Materials Review Committee must include at least one parent of district students.
2. All persons serving on the Instructional Materials Review Committees must complete a District developed instructional materials selection training program prior to reviewing and selecting materials. The training must assist viewers in complying with Section 1006.31(2), F.S. which requires, among other things, reviews to include materials portraying the ethnic, socioeconomic, cultural, religious, physical, and racial diversity of our society, and to exclude materials containing pornography and prohibited under s. 847.012, F.S.
3. Members of the district subject area Instructional Materials Review Committee must sign an "Instructional Materials Review Committee Member Affidavit" form before conducting committee business. The form specifies that Instructional Materials Review Committee members are prohibited from accepting gifts, money, emoluments, or other valuables which shall directly or indirectly influence the adoption or purchase of any instructional materials. A copy of the form can be found on the District's Media Services website. Instructional Materials Review Committee members' conduct should be in the best interest of the students and the District.
4. The Instructional Materials Review Committees shall meet as often as necessary to carry out their duties and responsibilities and make recommendations to the Superintendent. Meetings of Instructional Materials Review Committees convened for the purpose of ranking, eliminating, or selecting instructional materials for recommendation to the district school board must be noticed and open to the public in accordance with s. 286.011, F.S. Adoption of textbooks from such recommendations shall be considered as separate actionable items in meetings of the Board.

5. The District's Instructional Materials Adoption Policy Follows the Criteria Listed Below.

- A. The District's instructional materials adoption cycle shall correspond with the State adoption cycle except when determined to best serve the District's needs.
- B. The focus of the District review will be to evaluate materials submitted by publishers for State adoption or other appropriate materials with the purpose of recommending materials for District adoption.
- C. Content Standards for Instructional Materials

Pursuant to F.S. 1006.34, in the selection of instructional materials, library material, classroom library, and other reading material used in the public school system, the standards used to determine the propriety of the instructional material shall include: the age of the students who normally could be expected to have access to the material; the educational purpose to be served by the material with priority given to the selection of materials that align with Florida State Standards as provided for in F.S. 1003.41 and include instructional objectives contained within the curriculum frameworks for career and technical education.

1. Alignment with Subject Standards

Textbooks and instructional materials should provide quality learning experiences for students, enrich and support the curriculum, and be consistent with the Florida State Standards. The Instructional Materials Review Committee shall evaluate instructional materials utilizing the procedural guidelines provided by the District's Media Services department. Listed below are the major components of the review guidelines.

- a. Content (Alignment with curriculum and Florida State Standards; level of treatment; expertise for content development; accuracy of content; currency of content; authenticity of content; multicultural representation; humanity and compassion)
- b. Presentation (Comprehensiveness of student and teacher resources; alignment of instructional components; organization of instructional materials; readability of instructional materials; pacing of content; ease of use and durability of materials)
- c. Learning (Motivational strategies; teaching a few "big ideas"; explicit instruction; guidance and support; active participation of students; targeted instructional strategies; targeted assessment strategies)

2. Accurate, Objective, Balanced, Current, Free of Pornography and Prohibited Material and Suited for Student Needs

Pursuant to F.S. 1006.40(3)(d), any materials purchased shall be free of pornography and material prohibited under F.S. 847.012, suited to student needs and their ability to comprehend the material presented, and appropriate for the grade level and age group for which the materials are used or made available.

Pursuant to F.S. 1006.31, instructional materials recommended by each reviewer shall be accurate, objective, balanced, noninflammatory, current, free of pornography and material prohibited under F.S. 847.012, and suited to student needs and their ability to comprehend the material presented.

The District shall rely on Florida Department of Education rules to determine what is age-appropriate, or in the absence of rules, on a preponderance of reviews by subject experts and/or professionally recognized periodicals or organizations.

3. Bias-Free

Instructional materials must also be evaluated for bias-free content. There are five (5) areas in which bias is evidenced in instructional materials:

- a. Contextual Invisibility
- b. Stereotyping and Characterization
- c. Historical Distortions and Omissions
- d. Language Bias

- e. Inaccurate and Stereotypical Visual Images
4. Additional Considerations for Selection of Instructional Materials
- a. When recommending instructional materials, each reviewer shall:
 - i. Include instructional materials that accurately portray the ethnic, socioeconomic, cultural, religious, physical, and racial diversity of our society, including men and women in professional, career, and executive roles, and the role and contributions of the entrepreneur and labor in the total development of this state and the United States.
 - ii. Include materials that accurately portray, whenever appropriate, humankind's place in ecological systems, including the necessity for the protection of our environment and conservation of our natural resources and the effects on the human system of the use of tobacco, alcohol, controlled substances, and other dangerous substances.
 - iii. Include materials that encourage thrift, fire prevention, and humane treatment of people and animals.
 - iv. Require, when appropriate to the comprehension of students, that materials for social science, history, or civics classes contain the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States.
 - b. Consideration should be given to the broad racial, ethnic, socioeconomic, and cultural diversity of this state. A reviewer may not recommend any instructional materials that contain any matter reflecting unfairly upon persons because of their race, color, creed, national origin, ancestry, gender, religion, disability, socioeconomic status, or occupation.
6. Instructional Materials Adoption Evaluation Procedure
- A. Members of an Instructional Materials Review Committee shall apply the standards set forth in Section IV above in evaluating all instructional materials.
 - B. Members of an Instructional Materials Review Committee shall receive instructions and training in the evaluation techniques to be used, characteristics of effective instructional materials, and the skills necessary to make valid and objective decisions regarding the content and rigor of instructional materials.
 - C. The evaluation process shall include, as available, collection and review of the research about the instructional materials under consideration, as well as other districts' experiences with the instructional materials being reviewed.
 - D. The review process shall include scrutiny of each program's correlation to the State Standards and the assessments that are based on such standards.
 - E. Evaluation instruments employed by the Instructional Materials Review Committee members in its evaluation and selection process may be instruments developed by the Florida Department of Education or district-modified versions of the same.

7/21/23, 10:45 AM

- F. If an Instructional Materials Review Committee elects to have publisher presentations, every publisher submitting materials for consideration in a specific subject area shall be provided an equal opportunity to present. All publishers shall be given equal time for the presentation. The Instructional Materials Review Committee chair shall be responsible for ensuring equity.
- G. Instructional Materials Review Committee members shall review materials and return recommendations to the Assistant Superintendent over Instructional Materials.

7. Public Input for the Adoption of Instructional Materials

The public may review and comment on materials being considered and/or recommended for adoption. In addition, Escambia County public school parents/guardians or residents of Escambia County may contest a specific adopted material. Opportunities for public input are listed below.

- A. The public may review all materials being considered for adoption. Print and/or online samples of a student edition will be made available during the Instructional Materials Review Committee review process. Student editions of materials recommended for adoption will be made available online at least twenty (20) calendar days before the school board hearing.
- B. An open, noticed public meeting will be held to review the district's annual instructional materials plan, preview print/online samples, and provide online access instructions.
- C. An open, noticed school board meeting will be held to receive public comment on recommended instructional materials.
- D. The parent/guardian of a student enrolled in an Escambia County public school/resident of Escambia County may contest the district school board's adoption of a specific instructional material by filing a petition, on the "Motion to Contest the Adoption of an Instructional Material" form, within thirty (30) calendar days after the adoption by the school board.
 - 1. The "Motion to Contest the Adoption of an Instructional Material" form must be signed by the parent/guardian or resident, include the required contact information, and state the objection to the instructional material.
 - 2. Within thirty (30) calendar days after the thirty (30) day period has expired, the school board will conduct at least one open public hearing on all petitions timely received before an unbiased and qualified hearing officer. The hearing officer may not be an employee or agent of the school district. While not subject to Chapter 120 provisions, the hearing must provide sufficient procedural protections to allow each petitioner an adequate and fair opportunity to be heard and present evidence to the hearing officer.
 - 3. The school board's decision after convening a public hearing is final and not subject to further petition or review

8. Lost/Damaged Instructional Materials and Disposal of Instructional Materials

- A. Principals shall make a reasonable effort to collect from each pupil or pupil's parent/guardian the purchase price of any instructional materials the pupil has lost, destroyed, or unnecessarily damaged and to report and transmit the amount collected to the Superintendent. Failure to satisfy the debt may result in suspension of the pupil from participation in extra-curricular activities or an assignment to community service at the school site until the debt is satisfied.
- B. The District shall dispose of instructional materials when they have become unserviceable or surplus or are no longer on state contract by

7/21/23, 10:45 AM

BoardDocs® Pro

1. giving materials to other public education programs within the District or State, giving materials to teachers to use in developing supplementary teaching materials, or giving materials to students or others that may include any charitable organization, governmental agency, private school, or State; or
2. selling the materials to used book dealers, recycling plants, pulp mills, or other persons, firms, or corporations upon such terms as are most economically advantageous to the District. All moneys received because of sale, exchange, or other disposition of instructional materials shall be deposited in the District school fund and added to the District appropriation for instructional materials.

9. School Library/Media Center and Other Educational Materials

In accordance with F.S. 1006.28(2)(d), the School Board shall establish and maintain a program of school library media services for all public schools in the district, including school library/media centers, or school library/media centers open to the public, and, in addition, such traveling or circulating libraries as may be needed for the proper operation of the district school system.

The media specialist will stay informed about appropriate new publications, by using multiple sources, such as discussions with colleagues, attendance at conferences, and reading a variety of periodicals and book reviews. The media specialist will also receive and consider suggestions or requests brought forward by other faculty, students and parents/guardians. Potential new books for the school library media center, classroom library, and reading lists will be evaluated to determine if they would be suitable for student needs and whether they would be appropriate for the intended grade level and age group. In considering possible new acquisitions, the media specialist will consult reputable, professionally recognized reviewing periodicals and school community stakeholders. The media specialist will also assess the level of student interest in the subject(s) presented and the ability of students to comprehend the material. Books that are selected must be free of pornography and material prohibited under F.S. 847.012. After evaluation, the media specialist will inform the principal of those books that have been evaluated and are approved for inclusion in the collections. The procedure for developing library media center, classroom library, and reading list collections will be posted on the website for each school in the District.

A wide choice of materials that support the instructional program shall be available to students and professional staff to allow for varying achievement levels, free choice reading interests, and teaching/learning styles. Materials should be available in a variety of formats and reading levels, offer a well-balanced coverage of subjects, and support the diverse interests, needs, and viewpoints of the school community.

School librarians, media specialists, and other personnel involved in the selection of school district library and classroom library materials must complete a training program developed pursuant to F.S. 1006.29(6) before reviewing and selecting age-appropriate materials and library resources.

Upon written request, the District shall provide access to any materials or book specified in the request that is maintained in the school library and classroom library and is available for review. The school principal shall arrange a convenient time to provide such access.

A. Purpose of the Library/Media Center and Classroom Library Materials

The library/media center and classroom library shall contain a comprehensive collection of materials and equipment in a variety of media formats to:

1. provide a broad background of information resources in all areas of knowledge; and

7/21/23, 10:45 AM

BoardDocs® Pro

2. support the general educational goals of the District and the objectives of specific courses, including materials that represent diverse points of view.
3. Meet the personal needs and interests of students, including materials that:
 - a. nurture the development of recreational/listening/viewing, cultural appreciation, and aesthetic values;
 - b. represent the many religious, racial, ethnic, linguistic, and cultural groups in our society and reflect their contributions to the heritage and culture of our civilization;
 - c. foster respect for the diverse roles available to all people in today's society;
 - d. provide education media that reflect differing and/or opposing viewpoints; and
 - e. provide a comprehensive collection appropriate for the users of the library media center and classroom library.
4. Support the professional needs of teachers and administrators; and
5. Introduce new instructional strategies into the learning environment.

B. Student Access to Library/Media Center and Classroom Library Collections

Parents have the right to determine what they believe is and is not appropriate reading material for their student. Parents will be given the opportunity to choose Open Access, Limited Access, or No Access to the library/media center and classroom library collection. The access will be noted in the Student Information System and in the Library Catalog.

Parents of middle school students, grade six (6) through eight (8) shall also have the opportunity to opt in for their student to have access to the "young adult" section in the library/media center and classroom library. The access will be noted in the Student Information System and the Library Catalog.

C. Objectives of Selection

The primary objective of educational media is to implement, enrich, and support the educational program of the District; its secondary function is to contribute to the development of informed and responsible citizens. It is the duty of the District to provide a wide range of materials of different levels of difficulty, with diversity of appeal and representing different points of view taking into account the varied interests, abilities, and maturity levels of the pupils being served. The utilization of any specific item in educational media does not necessarily mean that the school or the District advocates or endorses the contents of the item.

To this end, the School Board of the Escambia District affirms that school library media centers and classroom libraries shall:

1. provide a comprehensive collection of instructional materials that will support the curriculum;
2. provide materials for teachers and students that will stimulate growth in knowledge, literacy appreciation, aesthetic values, and ethical standards;

7/21/23, 10:45 AM

BoardDocs® Pro

3. provide information that will enable students to make intelligent decisions and to understand the consequences of their decisions;
4. provide education media that reflects differing and/or opposing viewpoints;
5. provide materials which reflect the ideas and beliefs of the many ethnic, religious, and political groups that have contributed to the American and world heritage and culture; and
6. provide age-appropriate materials in multiple genres to encourage students to read for pleasure and information.

D. Responsibility for Selection of Materials

Selection of educational media is a continuous process which involves teachers, administrators, lay persons, other instructional personnel, and students as appropriate.

1. The responsibility for coordinating the selection process and making the final selection for library-media and classroom library materials rests with the school library media specialist who holds a valid educational media specialist certificate.
2. School library media specialists, and other personnel involved in the selection of school district library materials must complete the online training program developed by the Florida Department of Education prior to reviewing and selecting age-appropriate materials and library resources.
3. School principals are responsible for overseeing compliance with school district procedures for selecting school library media and classroom library materials.
4. Teachers are responsible for fully reviewing and evaluating outside media that will be used as classroom curriculum material.
5. Final selection of classroom curriculum material shall be the responsibility of the principal or principal's designee.

E. Evaluation and Selection of Library/Media Center Materials

In addition to supporting the curriculum, the school library/media center and classroom library affords students the opportunity to explore areas of interest and thought not covered by the prescribed curriculum; therefore, it should contain materials that allow for free inquiry, study, and evaluation. The selection process may include consultation with school administrators, other teachers, students, and parents/guardians to assure a comprehensive collection appropriate for users of the library/media and classroom library center. School principals are responsible for overseeing compliance with school district procedures for selecting school library/media center at the school to which they are assigned.

1. Each book made available to students through a school district library/media center, classroom library, or included in a recommended or assigned school or grade level reading list must be selected by a school district employee who holds a valid educational media specialist certificate, regardless of whether the book is purchased, donated, or otherwise made available to students.

7/21/23, 10:45 AM

BoardDocs® Pro

2. Each new title purchased to be available to students through a district library/media center and classroom library must be presented to the school's Library Advisory Council for input. The Library Advisory Council shall be comprised of at least the school's media specialist, two teachers, one parent and one community member. The principal will ensure the committee is representative of the school community.

3. Materials placed in media collections shall meet the criteria set forth in Section 1006.40(3)(d) F.S. The process of evaluating materials for inclusion in collections is continuous and systematic. Selections are based upon consultation with reputable professionally recognized reviewing periodicals and school community stakeholders. Materials for inclusion shall be considered according to the following criteria:
 - a. First consideration is given to the need of the individual school based on:
 - i. reader interest;
 - ii. support of state academic standards and aligned curriculum;
 - iii. existing collection;
 - iv. academic needs of students and faculty; and
 - v. requests from users of the collection (administrators, faculty, parents/guardians, students) are given high priority.

 - b. Materials for purchase are considered on the basis of overall purpose, timeliness, importance of the subject matter, quality of writing or production; readability and popular appeal; authoritativeness; reputation of the author, artists, publisher, producer, format; and cost.

 - c. In the selection of educational media, special consideration is given to the following:
 - i. Ideologies: factual information on any ideology or philosophy present in society;
 - ii. Religion: factual unbiased media which represents all major religions;
 - iii. Science: theories and factual information about scientific knowledge appropriate to the age level for which it is intended;
 - iv. Sex: pornographic, sensation, or titillating media are not included, but the fact of sexual incidents appearing in the media does not automatically disqualify them.

No book or other materials containing pornography shall be used or be available in the District as prohibited by Section 847.012, F.S.;

No book or other materials shall be used or be available that depicts or describes sexual conduct as defined in F.S. 847.001(19) for any grade level or age group for which such use is inappropriate or unsuitable, unless such material is for a course required by F.S. 1003.46, F.S. 1003.42(2) (n)1.g., or F.S. 1003.42(2) (n)3., or identified by State board of Education rule.

Date	6/13/22	Time	8:00 a.m.	Location	Northview High School
Date	7/13/22	Time	11:30 a.m.	Location	Northview High School

3. Committee recommendations:

The committee voted 4:3 recommending the novel remain as an optional title for a teacher to use as a class novel study for seniors at Northview High School. The Justification for Use of Outside Media form will still need to be submitted to and approved by the school administration before use in the classroom. An approved letter must also be sent home for parent approval.

4. Reason(s):

The concerns raised in the complaint are part of the characters' development throughout the novel. These concerns do not outweigh the potential discussions and literary value of the novel enough to remove it as an option for any teacher to use at Northview High School. A teacher wishing to conduct a novel study with this title will still need to follow the ECSD guidelines and procedures for the use of outside media.

5. Next Steps:

The principal will inform the complainant, in writing, of the committee's decision.

The complainant may appeal the decision, in writing, to the Assistant Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction. A district committee will then be formed to evaluate the material. The complainant shall have the right to proffer evidence for the committee's consideration that:

Any material used in a classroom, made available in a school library, or included on a reading list contains content that is pornographic or prohibited under s.847.012, F.S., is not suited to student needs and their ability to comprehend the material presented, or is inappropriate for the grade level and age group for which the material is used.

RE: School Materials Review Committee Recommendation/"Perks of Being a Wallflower"

Dear Mr. Marcanio:

I have been informed that filing an appeal with you would necessitate the next step in my attempt to have a particular book removed as an optional one within our school district. It is my understanding that instead of simply removing a book filled with obscene situations, words and questionable content, a person must appeal to a school committee first. Then if that fails (which unbelievably has happened in my case), one must then send the request to you to form a committee. This situation is concerning a book by Stephen Chlosky called "The Perks of Being a Wallflower." However, this is not the only book that should be considered for removal by our district, or any adult who has been entrusted with the minds and hearts of children and young adults.

As a veteran teacher with over 31 years of high school and college teaching experience, I never, in a million years, thought I would ever have to defend and beg my own school professionals, colleagues, and district personnel to be in agreement as to what constitutes goodness and values in literature. What I see taking place in the curriculum of public education is beyond alarming, and if those same adults who have been given the privilege to teach our children do not take their roles seriously, our county will end up in a world of trouble, similar to what is happening in Clay County currently.

What does it mean when a district orders entire classroom sets of books for teachers to use in their classrooms as a novel study and that book has sections on masturbation, bestiality, and teenage sex and lesbianism? With the new My Perspectives Curriculum with the English curriculum, teachers were allowed to vote for one classroom novel per grade level. The book in question is certainly not one I voted for. I had never even heard of this book; however, this particular book won the 12th English teacher vote throughout our district. Later when I questioned the English Supervisor, Jessica Rowell, why this book and another one selected for 11th grade called "Into the Wild," which had an entire section about "blow jobs," was even on the list, she replied "I have read both novels mentioned, but it is not best practice for an individual to make a district decision. That is why multiple teacher leaders and other departments were included in this process" (Email on May 13, 2022).

My question to you is this: If we, as teachers, cannot depend on our supervisors and department and ultimately the district to use decent guidelines in selecting classroom novels, then why have these positions? Let me share with you a few passages from "Perks of Being a Wallflower," the book that serves no literary purpose, even though my school committee voted 4 to 3 to keep it as an option for "any teacher to use at Northview High School" because the passages in question "are part of the characters' developments" (Letter sent by School Materials Review Committee at Northview High on July 14, 2022).

Below are a few of the passages in this book that, I hope, would cause any teacher NOT to use this as a classroom novel discussion. These are just a few.

p. 12—“And I opened the door to the basement, and my sister and this boy were naked. He was on top of her, and her legs were draped over either side of the couch.”

p. 21—“I was with Sam. We were both naked. And her legs were spread over the sides of the couch. And I woke up. And I had never felt that good in my life.”

p. 21—“Do you know what ‘masturbation’ is? I think you probably do because you are older than me. But just in case, I will tell you. Masturbation is when you rub your genitals until you have an orgasm. Wow!”

p. 31—“She grabbed his penis with her hands and started moving it. I wish I could describe this a little more nicely without using words like penis, but that was the way it was. After a few minutes, the boy pushed the girl’s head down, and she started to kiss his penis. She was still crying. Finally, she stopped crying because he put his penis in her mouth, and I don’t think you can cry in that position.”

p. 44—When most people left, Brad and Patrick went into Patrick’s room. They had sex for the first time that night. I don’t want to go into detail about it because it’s pretty private stuff, but I will say that Brad assumed the role of the girl in terms of where you put things.”

p. 110—“Patrick kept making jokes that I would get an ‘erection.’ I really hoped this wouldn’t happen. Once, I got an erection in class and had to go to the blackboard.

p. 158—“They start to make out. The stereo’s playing, and they’re just about to ‘do it’ when Parker realizes he forgot the condoms. They’re both naked on this putting green. They both want each other. There’s no condom. So, what do you think happened? ...They did it doggie-style with one of the sandwich bags!”

p. 159—“There was a guy named Carl Burns and everyone called him C.B. And one day C.B. got so drunk at a party that he tried to “f—k” the host’s dog.

p. 159—“And there was this guy they called ‘Action Jack’ because supposedly he was caught masturbating at a drunk party. ...”

There is plenty of more about masturbation, bestialty, and sex in this book. I hope you get my point.

The 11th grade book, purchased by our district for an optional classroom novel, uses the “F” word in every chapter. I did not take the time to fill out a removal form for this book. See below. I have marked the pages with explicit language .

Chapter 18--p. 189--"hell"

My question to you and now a district committee is this: What are we doing? Why in the name of everything that we are supposed to stand for am I, as a veteran English teacher, having to beg the district to get rid of these classroom novels and start having expectations of those put in positions of leadership just as we do our own students. We do not allow our students to speak this way in class. Why would we have this as a topic or in audio for a classroom novel? Why would our district EVER approve this? This is not literature. Do you think Shakespeare ever had to resort to these sorts of words of situations? No, he was a real writer and did not need to do implement shock-effect to get the audience's attention. What does it mean, though, when a school district gives the green light on classroom sets of novels such as these? Someone is not being diligent for the sake of our children.

I was told over and over that these books were optional. Mr. Marcanio, you and I both know that now many "teachers" do not have degrees in their fields, and they are desperate to utilize anything that the school district sends their way. Our district has provided these classroom sets of novels, which means that they are fair game for any teacher to utilize in the classroom. And actually, because the district has purchased them, as long as the themes coordinate with something a so-called teacher may be covering, he or she is at liberty to implement these novels within the classroom. Out of 2,000 books that were available to our district for free classroom novel sets, our Language Arts Department narrowed the list down to just a few, and these two mentioned in this letter were part of that list. But again, our supervisor admitted to reading these.

What does this say for our school district? Who is standing in the gap for our students. It is so easy to pass the buck to the teacher, but when a district itself approves this sort of unconscionable book for the classroom (much less for the libraries), what else can a teacher do? I will be the voice for my students, my community and the parents I know who would not approve of this. This book, as well as others, that our district has provided are pornographic, and there is no justification whatsoever for these being anywhere near our children. As a matter of fact, someone needs to be held accountable for actually making these sorts of books available to our children, especially under the guise of a classroom novel option. We all know that any material that has been made available, whether in a library, on a reading list or even in a classroom and contains pornographic content is a violation of Florida Statute 847.012.3(b), and according to 847.012.6, "Any person violating any provision of this section commits a felony of the third degree, punishable as provided in s. 775.082, s. 775.083, or s. 775.084.

I have email after email requesting to know who was responsible for approving these books and authorizing their usage as a classroom novel. The only answer I ever got was from Ms. Rowell who informed me that she had read them, but would not make an individual decision on them. I met with Ms. Lesa Morgan and Michelle White, the Director of Media Services, before school was out and even suggested a review committee of various books throughout the district. We need to get a hold on this.

Mr. Marcanio, these book choices are not limited to just classroom novel sets, but also library choices. Before school was out, our “superintendent, along with Michelle White and our school board approved a book distribution to take place with all of our students. These are fiction and non-fiction titles, over 1300 in all, that are of high-interest to young adults” (Email from Alison Robinson, Retired Librarian at Northview, May 19, 2022). Several students picked up a graphic novel called “The “The Girl from the Sea,” which was a book encouraging secret lesbian relationships. (See pictures below.)

So, perhaps unknowingly to you, our school board actually approved this graphic book which was made free to students throughout the district. If you were not aware that this sort of thing is going on in our district, why not? Don't we have checks and balances throughout? Isn't that the purpose of organizational leadership?

I am absolutely sickened to think that anyone would think these sorts of books are appropriate for our students and are considered literature and the above passages add to “character development.” In essence, four members of my own Northview committee have openly admitted to allowing pornographic material at my school, siding with Escambia County School District and ultimately the Language Arts Department who purchased these particular books to begin with, an act that the State of Florida has deemed to be a third-degree felony. (“Any person violating any provision of this section commits a felony of the third degree, punishable as provided in s. 775.082, s. 775.083, or s. 775.084).

We need accountability for questionable content that is blatantly coming into our curriculum, but we also need district leaders and board members to stand up and do their part to protect our children. Any adult in this district who reads these books and approves of an Escambia County teacher having high school class discussions about sex with a dog or masturbation for the sake of “character development” needs to be legally challenged indeed.

I await your input and am hopeful that you demand and desire decent literary choices for our students. After all, they deserve the best we have to offer.

Sincerely,

Vicki Baggett, M.A.T.

Purchased class sets of the Perks of Being a Wallflower will be collected and stored at a centralized district location. Copies of the title will be given to teachers as requested if the following criteria are met:

- Class is a 12th grade English Language Arts class
- Justification for Use of Outside Media form has been approved by school administration
- The opt-out parent letter has been approved by school administration

4. Reasons

The concerns raised in the complaint are part of the characters' development throughout the novel. These concerns do not outweigh the potential discussions and literary value of the novel enough to remove it as an option for an ELA teacher to use with 12th grade students. The district level distribution process will be established to ensure school administrator approval, parental input, and limited use to 12th grade students.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

5. Next Steps

The Assistant Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction will inform the complainant, in writing, by certified US mail, of the committee's decision.

The complainant may appeal the decision to the School Board. The appeal must be made in writing to the Superintendent within ten (10) days of receipt of notification of the district-level committee decision.

A decision on the complaint will be made at the next regularly scheduled Board meeting unless the request for appeal is filed within fourteen (14) days of the Board meeting. In that instance, the matter will be heard at the following regular Board meeting.

The Board shall review all evidence and materials presented at the district committee level. If the complainant wishes to proffer additional evidence, it must be presented to the Superintendent no less than eight (8) days prior to the meeting at which the matter will be heard.

The complainant will be afforded the opportunity to offer additional arguments in support of their position.

The public shall be afforded an opportunity to comment before the Board makes a final decision.

The Board reserves the right to use outside expertise if necessary to help in its decision making.

The Board decision will be final, and the Superintendent will implement the decision.

Decisions on reconsidered materials will stand for five (5) years before new requests for reconsideration of those items will be entertained.

RE: Additional Appeal to District Materials Review Decision Regarding "Perks of Being a Wallflower" by Stephen Chbosky

Dear Supt. Smith, Asst. Supt. Marcanio, and School Board Members:

I have received the District Materials Review Committee Decision today (Oct. 4, 2022), indicating that the committee voted 4 to 3 to allow this book, "Perks of Being a Wallflower" to remain as an optional novel use for 12th grade ELA teachers with an opt-out letter and a Justification for Use form approved by school administrators. This committee has based its finding on the characters' development throughout the novel, and although some may agree with the committee's findings regarding character development, I will offer the following based on simple facts, and not subjectivity.

1. Using this novel (or any novel that has this level of obscene content) in a classroom environment would certainly necessitate that the teacher be trained in the required field. Sadly, many English teachers throughout our district are neither trained nor certified in English. In other words, although a 12th English teacher may have the desire to "teach" the course, he or she may not have the background knowledge and/or experience. (Look at your own agenda slated for Oct. 6. There are 7 pages of teachers being hired out of field.) Why, then, would a district offer a controversial book as such to someone in this situation? And because this is happening all throughout our district, why have the book for classroom usage at all? There are so many others from which to choose. This book is currently removed or under investigation in so many states and districts (See Attachment 1) because of sexual and obscene content, including references to bestiality. Can our county really afford to put ourselves in the position that many of our neighboring counties have found themselves in regarding this book and others like it?

2. This letter states that administrators must approve a teacher's usage. What if the administrator does not approve it? Now you have opened the door for a potential situation between that principal and teacher. What about the student or students who may opt out of this classroom novel? What if that student is one of many? What will happen to this student during class discussion, etc.? Is it fair to single this student out by sending him/her elsewhere? What is the point here? Again, there are so many other books from which a teacher may choose.

3. Thirdly, your letter states that this book is only available for 12th English students. Do you realize that many students taking 12th grade English are under 18; therefore, they are minors. I currently have a senior English student who is 15 years old! I also currently have three students who are homeless. Who would opt-out on their behalf? The days of having a general age group in one class are over with.

4. The parental book rating for this book is 4/5, meaning it is NOT FOR MINORS because it contains sexual activities, assault and battery; sexual nudity; violence; alcohol and drug use. Florida Statutes prohibit a school district from knowingly providing minors with "any printed matter that contains explicit and detailed verbal descriptions or narrative accounts of sexual excitement or sexual conduct and that is harmful to minors." I here with provide the board with four and a half pages of excerpts straight from the book, so that the board can decide if this book fits the above criteria. (See Attachment 2).

5. Finally, in Mr. Marcanio's email to me dated August 11, 2022, he stated that decisions on reconsidered materials will stand for one (1) year before new requests will be entertained; however, in the letter received on October 4, with the District Review Committee's Decision, it is stated that "Decisions on reconsidered materials will stand for five (5) years before new requests for reconsideration of those items will be entertained." Why has this gone from one year to five? Surely this is a typographical error on someone's part or the committee's part. I, and the public need this clarified, please. (See Attachment 3—last two lines on the page).

In closing, it is my hope that our School Board, using FS 847.012 as a guide, considers the definition of what constitutes a minor; what constitutes detailed verbal descriptions or narrative accounts of sexual excitement or sexual conduct that is harmful to minors; and what business any high school English teacher would have discussing various passages from this book with minor children in a senior English class.

Sincerely,

Vicki Baggett, M.A.T.

Mrs. Baggett

I received your letter asking for a district committee to review The Perks of Being a Wallflower by Stephen Closky as an optional novel study for twelfth-grade students. All reconsideration requests must start at the school level, therefore the committee will only consider The Perks of Being a Wallflower by Stephen Closky and not the additional titles presented in the July 28, 2022 letter to me.

A district review committee of lay persons, media specialists, administrators, teachers, and parents is currently being formed. The committee will read The Perks of Being a Wallflower by Stephen Closky and then consider the educational philosophy of the school district, the professional opinions of other teachers of the same subject and other competent authorities, reviews of the materials by reputable bodies, the teacher's own stated objectives in using the materials, public input, and the objection of the complainant.

The committee will also review the original Reconsideration of Educational Media form you submitted to Mr. Sherrill and the letter you submitted to Mr. Marcanio asking for a district committee review. You may also proffer additional evidence for the committee's consideration that:

- A. An instructional material does not meet the criteria of s. 1006.31(2), F.S., or s. 1006.40(3)(d), F.S., if it was selected for use in a course or otherwise made available to students in the school district but was not subject to the public notice, review, comment, and hearing procedures under s. 1006.283(2)(b), F.S.
- B. Any material used in a classroom, made available in a school library, or included on a reading list contains content that is pornographic or prohibited under s. 847.012, F.S., is not suited to student needs and their ability to comprehend the material presented or is inappropriate for the grade level and age group for which the material is used.

If you wish to submit such additional information for the district review committee to consider, please communicate this in writing via email to Michelle White, Coordinator of Media Services, mwhite5@ecsdfl.us by August 18, 2022.

The findings of the district level committee shall be a matter of written record and transmitted to the Assistant Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction. The Assistant Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction shall inform the complainant, Coordinator of Media Services, the Superintendent, and School Board in writing of the action taken.

Decisions on reconsidered materials will stand for one (1) year before new requests for reconsideration of those items will be entertained, unless the decision is appealed and overturned at a higher level.

2	I just need to know that someone out there listens and understands and doesn't try to sleep with people even if they could have. I need to know that these people exist.
4	That's maybe why he felt all alone and killed himself.
6	But over the summer she had her braces taken off, and she got a little taller and prettier and grew new breasts.
12	And I opened the door to the basement, and my sister and this boy were naked. He was on top of her, and her legs were draped over either side of the couch. And she screamed at me in a whisper. "Get out. You pervert."
21	I had a weird dream. I was with Sam. And we were both naked. And her legs were spread over the sides of the couch. And I woke up. And I had never felt that good in my life. But I also felt bad because I saw her naked without her permission. ...Do you know what "masturbation" is? I think you probably do because you are older than me. But just in case, I will tell you. Masturbation is when you rub your genitals until you have an orgasm. Wow! I thought that in those movies and television shows when they talk about having a coffee break that they should have a masturbation break. ...I told Sam that I dreamt that she and I were naked on the sofa, and I started crying because I felt bad, and do you what she did? She laughed.
30	This one couple, whom I was told later were very popular and in love, stumbled into my room and asked if I minded them using it. I told them that my brother and sister said I had to stay here, and they asked if they could use the room anyway with me still in it. I said I didn't see why not, so they closed the door and started kissing. Kissing very hard. After a few minutes, the boy's hand went up the girl's shirt, and she started protesting. "C'mon, Dave." "What?" "The kid's in here." "It's okay." And the boy kept working up the girl's shirt, and as much as she sat no, he kept working it. After a few minutes, she stopped protesting, and he pulled her shirt off, and she had a white bra on with lace. I honestly didn't know what to do by this point. Pretty soon, he took off her bra and started to kiss her breasts. And then he put his hand down her pants, and she started moaning. I think they were both very drunk. He reached to take off her pants, but she started crying really hard, so he reached for his own. He pulled his pants and underwear down to his knees. "Please. Dave. No." But the boy just talked soft to her about how good she looked and things like that, and she grabbed his penis with her hands and started moving it. I wish I could describe this a little more nicely without using words like penis, but that was the way it was. After a few minutes, the boy pushed the girl's head down, and she started to kiss his penis. She was still crying. Finally, she stopped crying because he put his penis

	in her mouth, and I don't think you can cry in that position. I had to stop watching at that point because I started to feel sick, but it kept going on, and they kept doing other things, and she kept saying "no." Even when I covered my ears, I could still hear her say that. ..."Did they know you were in there?" "Yes. They asked if they could use the room." "Why didn't you stop them?" "I didn't know what they were doing." "You pervert,"...
33	Sam told me as we were hanging up our coats that Bob was "baked like a fucking cake."
44	When most people left, Brad and Patrick went into Patrick's room. They had sex for the first time that night. I don't want to go into detail about it because it's pretty private stuff, but I will say that Brad assumed the role of the girl in terms of where you put things. I think that's pretty important to tell you. When they were finished, Brad started to cry really hard. He had been drinking a lot. And getting really really stoned.
45	He was also crying pretty bad, and he decided if anyone asked him, he would say his eyes were red from smoking pot.
49	According to my sister, Sam used to be a "blow queen." I hope you know what that means because I really can't think about Sam and describe it to you.
56	They usually start when my mom's dad (my grandfather) finishes his third drink. It is around this time that he starts to talk a lot. My grandfather usually just complains about black people moving into the old neighborhood, and then my sister gets upset at him, and then my grandfather tells her that she doesn't know what she's talking about because she lives in the suburbs.
66	And I wasn't shy because we were trying to act like grown-ups, and we drank brandy. And I was warm. I'm still a little warm, but I have to tell you this. ...That's when Patrick put on the second side of the tape I made for him and poured everyone another glass of brandy. I guess we all looked a little silly drinking it, but we didn't feel silly.
70	She told me about the first time she was kissed. She told me that it was with one of her dad's friends. She was seven.
72	And he caught his sister making out on the back porch ...That made him cough when he kissed her but he kissed her anyway because that was the thing to do And he called it "Absolutely Nothing" because that's what it was really all about And he gave himself an A and a slash on each damned wrist And he hung it on the bathroom door because this time he didn't think he could reach the kitchen.
81	I agreed, but then my brother started saying how my sister was just a "bitchy dyke." ...I am probably the only one in the family with a friend who is gay.
94	Everyone else is either asleep or having sex.

Page	Content
95	That's what Bob said before he went to his bedroom with Jill, a girl that I don't know.
96	But the thing is that I can hear Sam and Craig having sex, and for the first time in my life, I understand the end of that poem. And I never wanted to.
100	Regardless, I decided to never take LSD again.
101	The book said that sometimes people take LSD, and they don't really get out of it.
110	Patrick kept making jokes that I would get an "erection." I really hoped this wouldn't happen. Once, I got an erection in class and had to go to the blackboard.
113	Sam did say that sex things were tricky with Mary Elizabeth since she's had boyfriends before and is a lot more experienced than I am. She said that the best thing to do when you don't know what to do during anything sexual is pay attention to how that person is kissing you and kiss them back the same way.
116	That's when she told me she was pregnant.
119	"Charlie, are you smoking?!" ..."I can't believe you're smoking!"
123	So, I told him a little about Mary Elizabeth, leaving out the part about the tattoo and belly button ring. ...He lit a cigarette and started telling me about sex.
124	..."wear protection,"Things like sex don't embarrass him. ...I think he was especially happy because I used to kiss this boy in the neighborhood a lot when I was very little, and even though the psychiatrist said it was very natural for little boys and girls to explore things like that, I think my father was afraid anyway.
126	And then she leaned down and started kissing my neck and ears. Then my cheeks. Then my lips. And everything kind of melted away. She took my hand and slid it up her sweater, and I couldn't believe what was happening to me. Or what breasts felt like. Or later, what they looked like. Or how difficult bras are. After we had done everything you can do from the stomach up, I lay on the floor, and Mary Elizabeth put her head on my chest.
130	Sex things are so weird, too. It's like after that first night, we have this pattern where we basically do what we did that first time, but there is no fire or Billie Holiday record because we are in a car, and everything is rushed. Maybe this is the way things are supposed to be, but it doesn't feel right. ...So, I asked her about Mary Elizabeth (leaving out the sex part) because I knew she could be neutral about it, especially since she "stayed clear" of dinner.
144	They were all laughing and making sex jokes, and Susan was doing her best to laugh along with them.
158	"So, they've been going out for a long time, and I think they've even had sex before, but this was going to be a special night..." ..."They start to make out. The stereo's playing, and they're just about to 'do it' when Parker realizes he forgot the condoms. They're both naked on this putting green. They both want each other. There's no condom. So, what do you think

	happened?" "I don't know." "They did it doggie-style with one of the sandwich bags!"
160	We hugged good night, and when I was just about to let go, he held me a little tighter. And he moved his face to mine. And he kissed me. A real kiss. Then, he pulled away real slow. ...So, he said "thanks" and hugged me again. And moved in to kiss me again. And I just let him. ...We didn't do anything other than kiss.
161	We drink a lot. Actually, it's more like Patrick drinks, and I sip. ...He said that eye contact is how you agree to fool around anonymously.
171	It was fun watching my sister dance the Time Warp on stage, but I don't think I could have handled her pretending to have sex with a large stuffed Gummy.
178	"Don't blame me that you fucked around on her since the beginning!..."
186	"This is good champagne." I don't think he knew the difference because he's a beer drinker. Sometimes, whiskey. ...I went with all my Ohio cousins, who promptly pulled out a "joint" and passed it around.
187	"Jesus. Look at these bleachers. How many colored people-"
188	Then, Mr. Small and the vice principal, whom Patrick swears is gay...
190	On the way home for the party, my Ohio cousins lit up another joint.
192	After about half an hour looking around the dance club, I finally saw Mary Elizabeth with Peter. They were both drinking scotch and sodas, which Peter bought since he is older and had his hand stamped. ...She told me that Alice was getting high in the ladies' room and Sam and Patrick were on the floor dancing. ...Then, he took Mary Elizabeth's drink out of her hand and drank it. "Hey, asshole" was her response. I think he was drunk, even though he hasn't been drinking lately, but Patrick does stuff sober, so it's hard to tell.
193	Her whisper smelled like cranberry juice and vodka.
196	After I ate my Ho-Ho, I lit up a cigarette,...
197	She was scared, and it wasn't until she had a sip of whatever we were drinking or a hit off of whatever we were smoking that she would calm down and be the same Sam.
202	So, I kissed her. And she kissed me back. And we lay down on the floor and kept kissing. And it was soft. And we made quiet noises. And kept silent. And still. We went over to the bed and lay down on all the things that weren't put in suitcases. And we touched each other from the waist up over our clothes. And then under out clothes. And then without clothes. And it was so beautiful. She was so beautiful. She took my hand and slid it under her pants. And I touched her. And I just couldn't believe it. ...Until she moved her hand under my pants, and she touched me.

RE: Letter 2- Additional Appeal to District Reviews Process on "Perks of Being a Wall Flower" by Chbosky

Dear Supt. , Asst. Supt. , and Board Members:

Please consider this letter an additional part of my District Review Committee Appeal, concerning the green-light approval of Stephen Chbosky's "The Perks of Being a Wallflower," a 1999 coming-of age novel that has won many literary awards but has also been highly challenged in high schools and libraries across America, after it was added to their optional or required curriculum.

I'm sure all of us can agree that books are very important in the development of a child's mind. Readers can get lost in the fantasies or the realities that words and situations can provide. Most of the time, authors (rather effortlessly) can subtly convince the reader into a particular stance on a subject or idea. Usually this occurs without the reader even realizing what he or she has fallen prey to, especially when the audience is a child. Contrary to what many want to admit, children are any persons beneath the age of 18. This is the group that I, as a veteran English teacher in Escambia County, FL, have foremost in my heart and mind as I am writing this letter to you.

Giving permission for our school district to offer "Perks of Being a Wallflower" as an optional novel study is providing a plethora of controversial topics and themes to children. This is true even if parental permission is required. The assumption is that the "teacher" in the classroom would be able to utilize and effectively discuss this novel in a way that would be beneficial to the student and the class. Since you were tasked with reading this novel, I assume you realize that the plot follows Charlie, a high school ninth grader, as he writes letters to an anonymous pen pal. He watches activities all during the novel. His writing is a form of therapy for his depression. After all he has just lost his best friend to suicide. He later befriends a high school senior, who happens to be gay, and also happens to be observed by Charlie having sex with another male. His new best friend introduces Charlie to his own stepsister, who reveals to Charlie that she was a drunkard and a person who is known for having multiple sex partners. She gets an abortion without her parents' consent. She also reveals to Charlie that as an 11-year-old, her father's boss raped her. As Charlie continues to grow and "come of age," he delves into LSD and marijuana, alcohol and sex also. The reader gets bird-eye scenes of masturbation and attempts at bestiality as well. By the end of the novel, Charlie realizes that his own Aunt Hellen, whom he had loved and trusted, had actually sexually abused him when he was a child, thus leading to one of the reasons for Charlie's attempt at suicide.

As people who are entrusted with children, we can look at the above themes and agree that all of these are very important issues in today's society; however, as those who have been entrusted with the curriculum of minors, let me ask you this? What is a good age for children to start learning about drugs, sex, and abuse? We know these things exist, but is it our public school's responsibility to discuss this with students? A teacher's job is to teach students HOW to think, not WHAT to think. This sort of mature and sexual content should be governed and discussed between minors and their parents, not minors and their teachers (many of whom are not even certified in their fields). Is our job not to safeguard children (Yes, seniors are still children if they are under 18.)? We have laws against pornography in our educational curriculum. Parents want their children to go to school to learn academia, not be indoctrinated on ways to have child-on-child sex, adult-on-child sex, child-on-child anal sex, and ways to create makeshift condoms using plastic Ziploc bags when real condoms are not available, all of which are available for discussion thanks to what is in this book in question. Teachers are not trained sex therapists, psychologists, psychiatrists or even mental health therapists. Why would our district offer this book (even as an optional one) for a senior English teacher to utilize in his/her classroom, under the guise of offering an opt-out for the student and parent? What happens to the student whose parents do opt out? Where does this student go during class discussions? Is this student not being discriminated against for not following the majority in the classroom?

The issue is this: Pornography in any form or fashion cannot be allowed in the public classroom or public school library. If we purchase books with these scenarios in them, then we are implicitly giving permission to use them and advising to our employees that we promote this. Our district has said that the principal has to have the final say. The principal is not the deciding factor for our district. It is you, the school board members, that will decide what is appropriate for our children as far as curriculum goes. Children have the right to innocence, and parents have the right to protect that innocence without having their children singled out for opting out of a pornographic book that should not be in the school's novel choices to begin with. How many students are we going to lose each year to homeschooling, private schooling, or virtual schooling before we realize that some knowledge is just too heavy for children?

As a teacher, I cannot believe I am even having to argue that pornographic material should be kept away from minors while they are at a public educational institution. This is true for both the classroom and the library. Of all of the books available to discuss things that actually MATCH the state required objectives for an ELA classroom, this book should not be considered.

Sincerely,

Vicki Baggett

RE: Additional Appeal to District Materials Review Decision Regarding "Perks of Being a Wallflower" by Stephen Chbosky

Dear Supt. Smith, Asst. Supt. Marcanio, and School Board Members:

I have received the District Materials Review Committee Decision today (Oct. 4, 2022), indicating that the committee voted 4 to 3 to allow this book, "Perks of Being a Wallflower" to remain as an optional novel use for 12th grade ELA teachers with an opt-out letter and a Justification for Use form approved by school administrators. This committee has based its finding on the characters' development throughout the novel, and although some may agree with the committee's findings regarding character development, I will offer the following based on simple facts, and not subjectivity.

1. Using this novel (or any novel that has this level of obscene content) in a classroom environment would certainly necessitate that the teacher be trained in the required field. Sadly, many English teachers throughout our district are neither trained nor certified in English. In other words, although a 12th English teacher may have the desire to "teach" the course, he or she may not have the background knowledge and/or experience. (Look at your own agenda slated for Oct. 6. There are 7 pages of teachers being hired out of field.) Why, then, would a district offer a controversial book as such to someone in this situation? And because this is happening all throughout our district, why have the book for classroom usage at all? There are so many others from which to choose. This book is currently removed or under investigation in so many states and districts (See Attachment 1) because of sexual and obscene content, including references to bestiality. Can our county really afford to put ourselves in the position that many of our neighboring counties have found themselves in regarding this book and others like it?

2. This letter states that administrators must approve a teacher's usage. What if the administrator does not approve it? Now you have opened the door for a potential situation between that principal and teacher. What about the student or students who may opt out of this classroom novel? What if that student is one of many? What will happen to this student during class discussion, etc.? Is it fair to single this student out by sending him/her elsewhere? What is the point here? Again, there are so many other books from which a teacher may choose.

3. Thirdly, your letter states that this book is only available for 12th English students. Do you realize that many students taking 12th grade English are under 18; therefore, they are minors. I currently have a senior English student who is 15 years old! I also currently have three students who are homeless. Who would opt-out on their behalf? The days of having a general age group in one class are over with.

4. The parental book rating for this book is 4/5, meaning it is NOT FOR MINORS because it contains sexual activities, assault and battery; sexual nudity; violence; alcohol and drug use. Florida Statutes prohibit a school district from knowingly providing minors with "any printed matter that contains explicit and detailed verbal descriptions or narrative accounts of sexual excitement or sexual conduct and that is harmful to minors." I here with provide the board with four and a half pages of excerpts straight from the book, so that the board can decide if this book fits the above criteria. (See Attachment 2).

5. Finally, in Mr. Marcano's email to me dated August 11, 2022, he stated that decisions on reconsidered materials will stand for one (1) year before new requests will be entertained; however, in the letter received on October 4, with the District Review Committee's Decision, it is stated that "Decisions on reconsidered materials will stand for five (5) years before new requests for reconsideration of those items will be entertained." Why has this gone from one year to five? Surely this is a typographical error on someone's part or the committee's part. I, and the public need this clarified, please. (See Attachment 3—last two lines on the page).

In closing, it is my hope that our School Board , using FS 847.012 as a guide, considers the definition of what constitutes a minor; what constitutes detailed verbal descriptions or narrative accounts of sexual excitement or sexual conduct that is harmful to minors; and what business any high school English teacher would have discussing various passages from this book with minor children in a senior English class.

Sincerely,

Vicki Baggett, M.A.T.

cc: Supt. Tim Smith; All Board Members; Asst. Supt. Marcanio

Author: George M. Johnson Title or Item: All Boys Aren't Bue

2. Meeting date(s), time(s) and location(s):

1/9/23 5:30 pm - 6:30 pm Spencer Bibbs

3. Committee Decision (will stand for 1 year unless appealed to the ECSD School Board)

The committee voted 5:0 recommending that All Boys Aren't Blue be available in all high school ECPS libraries.

4. Committee Comments Regarding the Titles:

Could this work be considered offensive in any way due to:

Profanity, brutality, sexual behavior, drugs/alcohol, violence, language, manner characters are presented, political positions, religion or portrayal of religious practices/ideologies

Are questionable elements of this work an important part of the overall development of the story or text?

Yes:

The sexual assault and experiences of the narrator are extremely important to understand the trajectory of his life. Without mentioning these experiences, the reader would not get the full experience of what his childhood was like as a queer, black man. The point of this memoir is to give a first-hand account of a queer, black young adult and without these moments, the memoir would not make sense.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

Throughout, the author's experiences are connected to his beliefs. He does not glamorize his experiences. He seeks to tell his truth for readers who may share circumstances.

This book is a memoir of growing up black and gay. The author's experience was complex and he discusses many circumstances and situations that shaped/influenced him.

As stated in the introduction "as heavy as these subjects may be, it is necessary that they are not only told but also read by teens who may have to navigate many of these same experiences in their own lives.

Author writes of an incident of child molestation and two sexual encounters.

This work is most suitable for which grades?

9-12

Taken as a whole, does this work have literary, artistic, political or scientific value for the suggested audience?

Yes:

Absolutely. This memoir gives a voice to many marginalized communities that represent our students.

There are teenagers in our community who benefit from hearing his experiences and perspectives. His life is part of the American experience.

This book discusses the experience of being black and gay, it touches on trauma (and processing trauma), family, death, etc. All of the things the author experienced in his (continuing) formative years.

It is expressly written so others in similar circumstances will be able to learn from his experiences and hopefully have an easier time with it.

The book details the importance of family and how the love of family provides a strong foundation and support through life's challenges. As a male who is black and gay, the author emphasizes that having that strong familial support is what can get any young person through any of life's challenges, especially those that he personally encountered.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

What is the overall purpose, theme or message of the material?

Besides giving a voice to oppressed communities, this memoir gives the reader hope despite the hardships one may have in their youth.

Memoir. Breakdown isolation for LGBTQ youths and help them avoid mistakes the author has made.

The overall message is “Be who you are” and “Be proud of who you are” and “Find the people who love you unconditionally.”

That it is ok to be a black homosexual and the damage which can occur as a result of expecting everyone to conform to a single viewpoint.

The book details the importance of family and how the love of family provides a strong foundation and support through life’s challenges. As a male who is black and gay, the author emphasizes that having that strong familial support is what can get any young person through any of life’s challenges, especially those that he personally encountered.

Are the concepts presented in a manner appropriate to the ability and maturity level of the suggested audience?

Yes:

Many of our students do align themselves as black or queer, so this memoir does focus on experiences that our students do go through. Our students are already exposed to dating violence, stigmas of mental illness, supporting friends with mental illness, and child trafficking through mandatory Suite 360 training, so this memoir can actually be used to support our students who have gone through the same experiences as Johnson.

This is written very simply and straight forward. There is a lot of explanation that accompanies more challenging parts.

It’s a memoir - the author’s experience - not a textbook or how-to book. It touches on mental health that most if not all high school students are dealing.

He explains the language (and uses less than many of my students). The sex is somewhat expected but clearly not intended to be arousing. Rather, it is descriptive as a way of explaining the full situation and consequences.

For the majority of the book, the author writes about experiences in his life that are when he was of a younger age or similar age group for students grades 9-12. He writes of his elementary, middle school, high school and college experiences.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

Are illustrations appropriate for the suggested audience’s developmental age?

Yes

Will reading or listening to this work result in a more compassionate understanding of human beings?

Yes:

What this memoir does is give a voice to marginalized communities. It shows the struggles of both black children and gay children.

Hearing about other people’s lives and struggles. The book also demonstrates compassion for people the author is in conflict. The author attempts to understand the struggles and perspectives of others.

Even among the gay community, there’s no “one size fits all” label - the author did a great job expressing his compassion for friends and family (even those that hurt him). This book is about a human experience.

He shows some of the negatives of his situation but does not present them a martyrdom. He works hard to humanize his characters.

Yes, reading or listening to this work will result in a more compassionate understanding of human beings. The author writes about being an African American male and a gay male. He wrote about his experiences being a part of both subgroups of general society and his general experiences and feeling of how sometimes each subgroup was viewed through a lens of negative bias.

Does the work offer an opportunity to understand and better appreciate the aspirations, achievements, and problems of different cultures or minority groups?

Yes:

Absolutely. This memoir shows acceptance of the LGBTQIAP+ community. The author even states himself that he was unable to fully see himself represented in history books. Per the author, “It’s an important reminder of just how important it is for Black kids to see themselves in the subjects they learn and the people they learn it from.” This author told a story that was not able to be told before, which now gives hope to our students that see themselves in this memoir.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

That is the core of this work. It comes from a place of wanting more understanding for the author's culture and sexuality.

The author discusses a lot of problems in the gay community, black community, gay and black community and also discusses achievements and aspirations.

He is describing himself: a minority within a minority and the negative impact the oppression of the majority has had.

The author chronicles being bullied and physically assaulted because of his race. He describes the circumstances of his attack and the emotions he experienced as a result of the attack.

NON-FICTION ONLY: Does the material contribute to the evolution of ideas and/or support state education standards?

Yes:

This memoir can definitely be used as a supplement to the mental health modules as well as the following ELA B.E.S.T. Standards.

RE: Appeal for “All Boys Aren’t Blue”

Dear Escambia County School Board Members:

Please find attached additional evidence for the appeal of the District Materials Review Committee’s decision for “All Boys Aren’t Blue.”

According to Cornell Law, the definition of pornography is material that depicts nudity or sexual acts for the purpose of sexual stimulation. Consequently, our own District's Policy Manual claims the following: Chapter 4, Instruction: E:3:v concerning Media Center selections, "No book or other materials containing pornography shall be used or be available in the District as prohibited by Section 847.012, F.S."

By now, surely we all know that District employees who offer such material to minors are guilty of a third-degree felony. We also know that the new HB1467 law guidelines for school and classroom libraries require that books must be free of pornography, suited to student needs and their ability to comprehend, and grade and age-level appropriate. Ultimately, the decision on this book and every other book that is appealed is left up to the school board. Unlike the District Review Committee, whose identity is hidden to the public, your decisions will be front and center for all concerned parents, employees and other community members to see. This is a good thing, because it will show exactly where you stand for the sake of our minor children who have been entrusted in our care.

Our District Materials Review Committee (who voted 5 to 0 to keep this book available to our minor children, by the way), wrote that this author “explains the language (and uses less than many of my [sic] students. The sex is somewhat expected but clearly not intended to be arousing. Rather, it is descriptive as a way of explaining the full situation and consequences,” and that this “memoir can actually be used to support our students who have gone through the same experiences as Johnson” (the author). The committee further states that this memoir can “definitely be used as a supplement to mental health modules as well as ELA standards . . . “

My question to the school board is where do we draw the line between providing a narrative sexual account for minor student connection? Just because an author is providing a step-by-step narrative of something that happened to him or her does not mean that the way it is written and the words and situations used are acceptable and beneficial for minors.

I herewith attach several excerpts for you. How many excerpts does it take to decide if a book is pornographic, age inappropriate, or not suited for students' needs? So because the committee thinks this memoir aligns with ELA Standards, does this mean any high school ELA teacher can use this book as a supplement within the classroom to teach the 11 ELA B.E.S.T. Standards that the committee listed? Do minor students need to read about cousins "tasting" and performing "oral sex" and then "humping" each other? Or what about "ejaculating so much that you bust?"

Many states have already pulled this book because of the sexually graphic content and violent language. Although you are charged with reading this book in its entirety, I am providing you many pornographic and obscene sections direct from the work itself, hopefully to assist you in this serious task at hand.

EXCERPTS:

"Yeah." But I laughed and said, "Get your hand off my butt."

You giggled. "That's not my hand."

"You're lying," I said. You then placed both hands on my hips, as we lay side by side. There was still something poking me.

You were fully erect at this point. I was nervous. "We gonna get in trouble."

"You can't tell anybody, okay?" you said. "You promise that you not gonna tell anyone?"

I promised. You then grabbed my hand and made me touch it. It was the first time I had ever touched a penis that wasn't my own. I knew what was happening wasn't supposed to happen. Cousins weren't supposed to do these things with cousins. But my body didn't react that way. My body on the inside was doing something, too. (p. 201)

The whole time I knew it was wrong, not because I was having sexual intercourse with a guy, but that you were my family. I only did that for about forty-five seconds before you had me stop. Then you got down on your knees and told me to close my eyes. That's when you began oral sex on me as well. It was the strangest feeling in the world. Unfortunately, I didn't have a handbook to learn sexuality as a queer boy. My crash course was happening right in front of me, and despite the guilt I was feeling, there was also euphoria. Things were happening to me that I couldn't explain. Feelings and emotions I had not known existed. After a minute or so, you stopped. You then laid me on the ground and got on top of me. You began humping me— back and forth back and forth—never penetrating me, though. It was just our bodies on top of each other going back and forth for several minutes while the music on the TV played in the background. Aretha Franklin was singing "A Rose Is Still a Rose." The irony of a song playing in the background about the deflowering of a young girl being used by a man. The irony of me lying on the basement floor.

You eventually got up off me and told me to come to the bathroom, that you wanted to show me one more thing. You turned on the light and closed the door. You began stroking yourself in front of me. I just stood there nervous because I didn't know what to expect next. You said, "Just keep watching, Matt." So I stood there and watched you for several minutes.

Then you began to moan slightly. I took a step back because I didn't know what was about to happen, and then it did. You ejaculated into the toilet in front of me. I was very unaware of what sex involved at the time— primarily because I stayed away from it. I knew I didn't like girls that way, and the first thing folks would ask you if you inquired about sex was whether "you were fucking or not." And I wasn't. We also had the bare minimum of sex education in school, so I was unaware of a lot of things.

Watching you ejaculate was shocking. I remember you telling me, "It's semen. One day when nobody is around, you should do this until you get this feeling you never felt before and bust."

(p. 203)

Two weeks after that night, I masturbated for the first time, and you were right. I was old enough to experience that feeling of what I would later learn is called an orgasm. Despite knowing that what happened with you was wrong, I now knew that I was definitely attracted to boys.

...I was soon a high school freshman, with sexually active teens all around me. (p. 207)

As we kissed, he began unzipping my pants. It was clear to me in this moment that he wasn't new to this.

He reached his hand down and pulled out my dick. He quickly went to giving me head. I just sat back and enjoyed it as I could tell he was, too. He was also definitely experienced in what he was doing, because he went to work quite confidently. He then came up and asked me if I wanted to try on him. I said sure. I began and he said, "Watch your teeth." I didn't want to let him know I was inexperienced. So, I slowed down and took my time and luckily got into a good rhythm. He didn't know I was a virgin, and I did my best to act dominant like my favorite porn star. I was an actor, and this was my movie.

There was so much excitement running through my body: This was much more than losing my virginity. For once, I was consenting to the sexual satisfaction of my body. This moment also confirmed that sex could look how I wanted it to look. And that it could be passionate and kind, but most importantly, fun and satisfying.

His body felt great in my mouth.

I came up after a while and kissed him again. We both got up and went into his bedroom, where we got completely naked. He took off his clothes and immediately lay on his stomach. I then took off my shirt, and then my boxer briefs. I got behind him. There was moonlight coming through the shades of the dark room. Two Black boys under the glow of blue moonlight. How poetic, dare I say ironic?

Now, I was scared as hell. One, because I didn't know what I was doing and clearly, he did. Two, because it was still college, and my fear of word getting out that I was inexperienced or bad in bed would have been too big of a campus rumor. Let alone that I was having sex with men and a friend of someone in my chapter.

For the first few minutes, we dry humped and grinded. I was behind him, with my stomach on his back as we kissed. After a few minutes of fun and games, he got up and went to his nightstand, where he pulled out a condom and some lube. He then lay down on his stomach. I knew what I had to do even if I had never done it before. I had one point of reference, though, and that was seven-plus years of watching pornography. Although the porn was heterosexual, it was enough of a reference point for me to get the job done.

I remember the condom was blue and flavored like cotton candy. I put some lube on and got him up on his knees, and I began to slide into him from behind. I tried not to force it because I imagined that it would be painful; I didn't want this moment to be painful. So I eased in, slowly, until I heard him moan.

As we moved, I could tell he was excited and I was, too, but the pride in me told me not to show it. I felt like I was in control and proud of myself for getting it right on the first try—all the while still being nervous. I wanted to stay dominant in that moment. We went at it for about fifteen minutes before I started to get that feeling. Weakness in the legs, numbness in the waist. I finally came and let out a loud moan—to the point where he asked me to quiet down for the neighbors. I pulled out of him and kissed him while he masturbated. Then, he also came. That night was glorious. I had conquered a fear and had sex with a man on my own terms (p. 266).

For me, I was finally on my journey of sexual exploration and couldn't wait to do it again.

He and I had sex a second time two weeks later, before school let out for summer. ...I had several sexual encounters that involved mutual masturbation and kissing and fooling around, but I just couldn't bring myself to have penetrative sex again. I was hesitant because I still had a lot of questions. As much as I enjoyed being on top, I wasn't sure if I always wanted to be the dominant person in the bedroom. I was still a novice at sex, and even more at gay culture and sexual positions. I wasn't sure if because I "topped" him, that meant I always had to be the top. I also wanted to try the bottom position, which I associated with being the more submissive person.

...I just needed time to reflect, and figure out if sex for me was going to be the casual hookup thing or if I was ready to now seek something more. (p. 269)

I got to his apartment and we both began drinking while watching TV. This lasted all of ten minutes before we started kissing and undressing each other. He then stood up and grabbed me by the hands and led me into his bedroom. We took each other's clothes off, fast but deliberate. After, he told me to lie down on the bed. He asked me to "turn over" while he slipped a condom on himself.

My heart immediately started to race. Nervously, I asked him what he was doing, and he said, "You." I laughed at first but then told him that I had never been the bottom. He looked at me and said, "Well, that's about to change tonight."

I was extremely nervous. There is a fear, as with most things that you are doing for the first time. But this was my ass, and I was struggling to imagine someone inside me. And he was . . . large. But, I was gonna try.

it I had previously topped someone who clearly enjoyed, but he had been enjoying anal sex before I ever came along. He knew what to expect. I didn't. As an avid porn watcher, the only thing I knew about anal sex previously was that it was painful, or at least played up as such on the cameras.

Nervous and drunk, I listened and got on my stomach. He got on top and slowly inserted himself into me. It was the worst pain I think I had ever felt in my life. He then added more lube and tried again, which felt better but not by much. He began his stroking motion. Eventually, I felt a mix of pleasure with the pain.

I can't say that I didn't enjoy it, because I did. But it was painful for sure. In those few minutes though, I can say that he was gentle. His aim wasn't to hurt me, and my aim was for him to be pleased, too. He didn't last long inside of me, thankfully. He gave me a kiss before he pulled out. I didn't stay long, nor did I masturbate after. I was in a state of shock. I just wanted to get back home. (p. 271).

Again, I ask you, do students actually need to read, at a Florida public high school library, what it means to have an experience of someone being "inside their ass" in order to master our Florida BEST Standards? If that's the case, then many of us apparently are very shallow in our knowledge, based on what was provided to us in our schools' libraries from earlier years.

3. Committee Decision (will stand for 1 year unless appealed to the ECSD School Board)

The committee voted 6:3 recommending that Drama be available in all elementary, middle, and high school ECPS libraries.

4. Committee Comments Regarding the Titles:

Could this work be considered offensive in any way due to:

Sexual behavior - attraction, kiss, aberrant behavior

Are questionable elements of this work an important part of the overall development of the story or text?

Yes

This is a story of a 7th grade girl who loves being in Drama club and working behind the scenes. She has a crush on a boy who doesn't like her back. She also meets twin brothers and develops a close friendship with them. One of the twins is gay and has a crush on another boy. The book covers basic middle school issues like developing feelings for someone and becoming more independent.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

Elementary students may find the kissing in a graphic novel “icky” because of their immaturity. “Going Out” and physical intimacy doesn’t begin as a recognized behavior/relatable until later in grade school.

Sexuality is a touchy subject.

No

There is no depiction of romantic contact between any of the characters. The story is about friendship and middle school crushes.

There is nothing in this work that could be considered offensive. This book tells the story of the main character’s romantic interest. There is no sex in any part of the story. The characters reflect real-life situations.

I didn’t find any questionable elements in this story.

While a conflict involves a student’s attraction (romantically) to another, any “sexual behavior” is incidental to the main plot of the story: conflicts that arise between students working together on a play.

The story is not built around any questionable element. It is about Callie and the issues she deals with day to day.

The book does not qualify as indoctrination: there is no evidence of trying to make the reader accept the belief of the author nor characters.

This work is most suitable for which grades?

3-5, 6-8, 6-8 YA, 9-12

Taken as a whole, does this work have literary, artistic, political or scientific value for the suggested audience?

Yes

This book’s message is about working hard to accomplish a goal while working through regular middle school challenges.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

This is like a middle school playbook. Every student can somehow relate to one of the characters in the book because they are experiencing the exact same discoveries and emotions at this age.

This book has literary and artistic value in the themes that are presented due to the idea that all readers will be able to identify with the idea of an adolescent navigating relationships as well as the ups and downs of life and love. This book also includes the value of hard work and stick-with-it-ness. The main character of the story continues to come against challenges to her vision of what the scenes in the play “Moon Over Mississippi” should look like. She continues to work toward her goal of making a cannon until she creates the scenes she wants. This work shows the value of art through the steps of putting on a production. This book speaks to students who are going through similar situations and introduces those who may not have had this experience to multiple layers of putting on a production. there are characters in this story that all readers can relate to.

I feel the book as a whole shows the preteen experience with middle school “crushes” in a real and honest way. It also shows different types of relationships and does not focus on only one type.

Students are exposed to students every day that are struggling with their identity. This story encourages empathy in relationships with others.

Drama gives realistic portrayals of middle school/teen angst. Discovering who you are and how you fit into the larger scheme of things is is part of everyday life for this age group.

Drama is a well written middle/high school novel. It reflects age appropriate concerns.

THEME: This work emphasizes the importance of teamwork and how there are many “STARS in the show”. Artistically, this work encourages kids and young teens to BE CREATIVE in problem solving and to think critically to achieve personal goals.

Covers a lot of what young teens go through and different relationships.

What is the overall purpose, theme or message of the material?

Work hard to overcome and succeed.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

How much middle school is just DRAMA! Students are learning to navigate dating, affection, and who they want to be. Awkward age is summed up perfectly in this book.

The overall purpose or theme of this story is friendship, teamwork, inclusion, and determination.

Don't make assumptions about people. Get to know them and accept them for who they are. I also enjoyed the very diverse group of friends in the story.

Working hard to accomplish goals, the importance of empathy in all relationships, communication among peers for understanding, dealing with confusing feelings, and handling conflicts among peers.

Drama depicts what might be happening in any middle or high school on any given day. Teamwork is a dominant theme as is the importance of accepting yourself and others for what they are.

The message of Drama is that of acceptance by peers, as well as being determined towards goals.

The importance of teamwork to achieve a common goal. Many "stars" in "the show".

Friendships, teamwork.

Are the concepts presented in a manner appropriate to the ability and maturity level of the suggested audience?

Yes

The book uses real-life situations and humor to convey the importance of teamwork and perseverance.

Yes, it is a direct reflection of what they are experiencing right now. They are learning about who they are and who they want to be. These are all typical age-appropriate situations for this age group.

The concepts in this book are suitable for readers in the recommended age group from the publisher.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

The concepts are presented in a way that is easily understood. As a middle school media specialist, I feel the maturity level is on point.

There are students that identify as homosexual and others who are struggling with identity in middle school. Middle/high schoolers I've encountered struggle with similar issues. Show them possible ways of handling these conflicts in their relationships with others and themselves.

This book is very realistic in portraying middle/high schoolers and the drama they face every day. Middle school students may not date, but they definitely deal with crushes and the broken heart.

Middle/high school students are seeking peer relationships and are goal oriented.

I think older grade school children will find this story very relatable and fun to read. Grades K-3 might not understand some of the larger, overarching concepts/they may go over their heads.

Happening in the same age group.

Are illustrations appropriate for the suggested audience's developmental age?

Yes

Will reading or listening to this work result in a more compassionate understanding of human beings?

Yes

This book has "geeks", "cool kids", "jocks" as well as characters of many ethnicities. They are all trying to figure out who they are and the challenges they face help the reader understand each of the characters more.

I believe it will result in a better understanding of human beings. This book provided similar problems to what students face everyday in school without judging.

This book will absolutely result in more compassion and understanding of human beings. The characters in this story are very relatable and realistic. It is important for readers to see themselves in books as well as see the struggles that others go through. These experiences humanize others and help to build empathy and compassion as well as an understanding of others.

I thought the material was handled very well throughout the story. I did not see it as a story only focused on a gay relationship, there were many middle school relationships that were part of the story.

Being exposed to people that are different from us helps build understanding and compassion (even if they are fictional characters).

Middle/high school is a time of much sexual confusion for many. Seeing characters deal with the same issues might open the doors for meaningful conversations about acceptance and compassion.

Everyone has felt peer rejection, as Callie and others work through situational circumstances that are reader relatable.

In this story, there is a lot of elevated emotional stakes. Kindness and open-affirmation of others talents, preferences, communication style, and level of emotional intelligence is offered as an overarching theme.

Does the work offer an opportunity to understand and better appreciate the aspirations, achievements, and problems of different cultures or minority groups?

Yes

This book has “geeks”, “cool kids”, “jocks” as well as characters of many ethnicities. They are all trying to figure out who they are and the challenges they face help the reader understand each of the characters more.

It opened up the reader’s eyes to what the boy was experiencing as he told his friend he was gay. She openly accepted him.

There are characters of color in this story, though it does not delve deeply into cultural differences, you can see that the aspirations of all groups of people are similar. That as humans we are all connected.

Gives readers exposure to people struggling with attraction to same-sex peers and opposite-sex peers.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

The book touches on the LGBTQ population. The confusion, stigma are mentioned. Again, the issue is not central to the story at all.

Agreed, through the character interactions the reader will reflect on the diversity among people. There can be compassion felt that will be used in real life situations.

There is an incredibly diverse student body in this graphic novel. None of which impacts the ultimate themes (or limitly impacts it) but because this is a graphic novel - it's important to show this diversity for inclusion and to break down stereotypes.

NON-FICTION ONLY: Does the material contribute to the evolution of ideas and/or support state education standards?

NA

Additional Thoughts:

5. Next Steps

The Assistant Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction will inform the complainant, in writing, by certified US mail, of the committee's decision.

The complainant may appeal the decision to the School Board. The appeal must be made in writing to the Superintendent within ten (10) days of receipt of notification of the district-level committee decision.

The Board shall review all evidence and materials presented at the district committee level. If the complainant wishes to proffer additional evidence, it must be presented to the Superintendent no less than eight (8) days prior to the meeting at which the matter will be heard.

The complainant will be afforded the opportunity to offer additional arguments in support of their position.

The public shall be afforded an opportunity to comment before the Board makes a final decision.

The Board reserves the right to use outside expertise if necessary to help in its decision making.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

The Board decision will be final, and the Superintendent will implement the decision.

4. Committee Comments Regarding the Titles:

Could this work be considered offensive in any way due to:

The following items were selected:

profanity, sexual behavior, prurient behavior, drugs/alcohol, brutality, violence, aberrant behavior, cruelty, religion or portrayal of religious ideologies

Are questionable elements of this work an important part of the overall development of the story or text?

Yes:

The harsh truth of racism in the 1940s. The effects of self-loathing are just as relevant today and many young people will be able to relate to the main characters.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

The behavior leads to Pecola's coming undone. Past behaviors lead to many characters' outcomes.

The Bluest Eye is told by an adolescent who is trying to find a place in the "we" of a community that includes adults suffering and doing harm to each other and to her friends.

The novel describes a scene of intense racism where white men force a black man to sexually abuse a black woman. This is important for the novel because it shows how the severe anti-black racism of some dehumanizes African Americans and, in this instance, leaves both people scarred for nothing other than the pleasure of racists. The South's history is full of such moments and they need to be known and understood to understand present racism in the U.S.

The sexual behavior contained within "The Bluest Eye" works as a type of violent oppression.

This work is most suitable for which grades?

The following were selected:

6-8, 9-12, 11-12

Taken as a whole, does this work have literary, artistic, political or scientific value for the suggested audience?

Yes:

The book dares the reader to challenge his or her beliefs or preconceived notions of beauty. The novel looks at the continuing effects of racism and its pervasiveness for a community.

Long-term effect of self-hatred/loathing.

Toni Morrison is considered one of the most accomplished writers of a generation. The use of the "we" as a viewpoint and her intensive attention to sensory experience is unique, especially for the time in which her career began. She specifically states in interviews that she wanted to write books she could not find to read.

This book describes the effects of anti-black racism on black women as well as black men. The novel offers a look at working class black life in the early half of the 20th century. Besides Toni Morrison won the Nobel Prize, the highest award in World Literature, making her work essential in telling the American story and a role model for black women.

Yes, "The Bluest Eye" has literary, artistic, and political value for grades 9-12.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

What is the overall purpose, theme or message of the material?

The novel looks at the continuing effects of racism and its pervasiveness for a community. It also addresses the roles of women of color in a community (interactions, involvements, opportunities, or lack thereof).

Coming of age in a world that isn't kind to them. Struggles and trials facing young children. Self-hatred, loathing, racism.

As stated above, the adolescents in The Bluest Eye are trying to understand their place in a community in which harm is occurring. They are trying to understand the nature and reason for the harm.

The overall purpose of the novel is to express the detrimental effects of racism, especially anti-black racism, on the entire community. Besides that, the novel is written in beautiful prose that is unmatched in American literature. Also, the effects of a community that knows sexual violence and blames children for the acts of adults.

"The Bluest Eye" gives a detailed account of the impact of white beauty standards on black girls and women.

Are the concepts presented in a manner appropriate to the ability and maturity level of the suggested audience?

Yes:

Mature readers shall have access to this book. While the narrator is young, it is not a typical YA narrator and may be too complex for less sophisticated readers.

Students are dealing with these issues or know someone who is or has.

Of all Morrison's novels, this is the only one told from the viewpoint of adolescents. Teens who are not reading at grade level might find the text difficult, but that is true of most classics.

For students of the age range of high school students, the content is surely known. Racism presents itself every day in society, as well as anti-black and anti-women instances are around from TV, the internet, books, magazines, and even in classroom discussions. Same with sex and sexuality. While the text is sometimes graphic, the book represents true life stories that students need to know about to hopefully overcome racist, sexist, and oppressive attitudes.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

“The Bluest Eye” is an 8th-grade reading level; nevertheless, the mature content requires a more mature audience of the 9th-12th grade level.

Are illustrations appropriate for the suggested audience’s developmental age?

Not applicable

Will reading or listening to this work result in a more compassionate understanding of human beings?

Yes:

The book explains the failures of the world and our society that mature readers will question. Compassion, understanding, and insight into communities of color.

Opens the door to a world many students have never seen/felt/experienced.

Intergenerational suffering and harm is something that teens need to reckon with and do reckon with. It is developmentally appropriate for their age. Understanding the suffering of others increases compassion.

The characters are presented in a very sympathetic light and one learns how they become the people they are through Toni Morrison’s exquisitely beautiful prose. Further, one cannot help but feel sympathy towards Pecola as she feels the only way to survive her ordeal is to get blue eyes like Shirley Temple. So sad.

“The Bluest Eye” allows readers to understand how the main character’s coming-of-age story was affected by white beauty standards.

Does the work offer an opportunity to understand and better appreciate the aspirations, achievements, and problems of different cultures or minority groups?

Yes:

The book explains the failures of the world and our society that mature readers will question. Compassion, understanding, and insight into communities of color.

Problems

The problem of child abuse and child sexual abuse is not specific to any culture; it is pervasive. That being said, the novel also explores challenges unique to African American persons in the middle of the last century. As for achievement, Toni Morrison’s literary significance is the achievement.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

By reading this book, one cannot help but feel concerned and have a better understanding of Pecola. In a divided society, books hold a key to understanding other cultures, as well as recognition of similarities between peoples. Representation, especially representing the works of Black Nobel Prize-winning authors, is incredibly important.

“The Bluest Eye” allows readers an opportunity to understand the aspirations and problems of different cultures and minority groups.

NON-FICTION ONLY: Does the material contribute to the evolution of ideas and/or support state education standards?

Not applicable

Additional Notes

Many classics deal with sexual themes. The Sun Also Rise is an entire book about impotency. The Great Gatsby is about adultery and murder. Toni Morrison’s writing was a movement away from the implied off-stage tragedy to a sensory-oriented language from which the readers cannot look away or pretend the tragedy is not occurring or is not important. The use of the “we” in her writing asks the reader to engage in questions about their role in the community. This is a departure from the removed narrator of early and mid-century texts or the “I” of more individualistic writing. Faulkner wrote on many of the same themes in this book, but either through a removed narrator or in such a way, for instance, in The Sound and the Fury, could read it and have not realized what happened. The strength of Morrison’s work, which critics seem disturbed by, is that the disturbing is disturbing. That and obviously her skilled use of language.

This was one of the best novels I’ve ever read. Morrison’s style is incredible and her literary voice holds a remarkable ability to convey a powerful story, complex in nature, but in a very accessible manner. I’m a better person for having read this book and could see having a positive impact on so many students who are grappling with many issues that this book covers. Not to mention Toni Morrison won the Nobel Prize for literature. So many people need to see diverse faces in the literary canon, it would be criminal to remove this book.

The complainant will be afforded the opportunity to offer additional arguments in support of their position.

The public shall be afforded an opportunity to comment before the Board makes a final decision.

The Board reserves the right to use outside expertise if necessary to help in its decision making.

The Board decision will be final, and the Superintendent will implement the decision.

4 votes to keep in high schools libraries
1 vote to keep in middle and high school libraries

4. Committee Comments Regarding the Titles:

Could this work be considered offensive in any way due to (the following were checked):

Profanity, sexual behavior, prurient behavior, brutality, violence, language, religion or portrayal of religious practices/ideologies, drugs/alcohol, aberrant behavior

Are questionable elements of this work an important part of the overall development of the story or text?

Yes:

Sexual assault (rape) is an act of violence and is integral to the novel and plot.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

The main characters are teenage girls in high school. Their behavior is typical of girls in that age. The other characters also typical high school.

The novel uses risque topics to address a misogynistic culture in a high school. The elements are often categorized as questionable, but they are relevant parts of the American teenage dialect and culture.

Having walked the halls of middle and high schools, there was nothing in this book that would warrant a deviation from the reality of today's secondary education society.

The dialogue is authentic to today's teenagers. The protagonists have distinct and unique personalities and very different life experiences. Yet, each is touched by the culture of male entitlement and that is their unifying purpose.

This work is most suitable for which grades?

The following were selected:

9-12

Taken as a whole, does this work have literary, artistic, political or scientific value for the suggested audience?

Yes:

Young adult novel that is representative of girls of different backgrounds uniting to help one another. The work fictionalizes events that are common occurrences in 2023.

This novel is very valuable for teenagers. 3 misfits and the changes they are able to make.

The novel address an important theme of activism, self-acceptance, and empowerment. It has value for any high school student.

The reality is that rape culture and human trafficking does exist in our society. This book sheds light onto the situations that occur, how they occur, and what opportunities are possible to overcome and thrive when given proper channels of support. This book can also be a cautionary tale of young men and women to help them protect themselves from potentially harmful situations.

Literary: well written; Political: important, cautionary tale about sex crimes and their consequences; Scientific: demonstrates well the manifestation of autism

What is the overall purpose, theme or message of the material?

Purpose is to entertain and inform its audience about the need for victims and non-victims, boys and girls alike, to speak out against sexual violence.

Expose the rape culture of the school. Different groups of girls coming together. Commitment and making positive change. Not giving up

The novel is an indictment of rape culture and condemns misogyny in several meaningful ways.

It is possible to overcome extreme trauma caused by manipulation with appropriate support.

There are many, but mainly it is a cautionary tale for young people who can too easily be victimized and the power of advocacy, even if it is reactive rather than proactive.

Are the concepts presented in a manner appropriate to the ability and maturity level of the suggested audience?

Yes:

Maybe cliched in some ways but appropriate for high school students.

The 3 main teenage girls represent 3 very realistic teens.

The themes and content of the novel are within the vocabulary and maturity level of high school students.

This book is truly a slice of the ugliness that exists in today's world. To bring it to the attention of young adults and help them know how to protect themselves is important.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

This book does not speak “down” to teenagers. It was the language that even if they do not “use” it, they hear it, and are familiar with it.

Are illustrations appropriate for the suggested audience’s developmental age?

Not applicable

Will reading or listening to this work result in a more compassionate understanding of human beings?

The autistic child, the child of immigrants, the child previously outcast through no fault of her own. EVERY person, EVERY character has a story - realizing that there is more that CAN unite humanity than divide it can easily be taken from this book.

Readers see the sadness of Lucy and they can feel compassion. Readers understand the struggles of Rose and the timid Grace and the awkwardness of Erin.

The novel condemns rape, misogyny, violence, and teaches the value of tolerance and compassion.

There were multiple characters in this book that had all experienced sexual trauma and they all dealt with the burden of that pain in different ways. In several places in the book, the Nowhere Girls had meetings that provided opportunities for catharsis and for the girls to have a greater understanding of each other based on the fact that several of them had experienced rape, but felt shamed by the experience and did not feel comfortable opening up to others for fear of being labeled. These girls grew into more compassionate people once they understood they were not alone.

We can only hope. In addition to the obvious - victims - it also explores topics of social cliques, dysfunctional families, child labor, the influence of faith, bigotry, stereotype casting, immigration, and autism.

Does the work offer an opportunity to understand and better appreciate the aspirations, achievements, and problems of different cultures or minority groups?

Yes:

See above - It is a story of the people - think stereotypical high school cliques - coming together to combat an evil.

Rosina - Mexican family and gay. Erin - awkward

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

One of the main characters is a queer Latin-X character. The novel touches on the struggles and development of this character through an appropriate cultural lens that is both appropriately displayed and accessible for high school students.

This book addressed the struggles of immigrant populations, differing sexual orientations, and mental health issues in a way that converts them from a “label” to someone who is trying to find their way in the world.

Back and brown, gender fluid, immigrants, African- American - all of these are represented in this book.

NON-FICTION ONLY: Does the material contribute to the evolution of ideas and/or support state education standards?

Not applicable

Profanity, sexual behavior, brutality, violence, language, cruelty, drugs/alcohol, aberrant behavior, manner characters are presented, language

Are questionable elements of this work an important part of the overall development of the story or text?

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

Yes:

Precious's sexual abuse is the catalyst for her story.

I feel like this answer can go both ways. The sexual violence that occurs is what drives this entire story. I feel like the language was not an important part and the comments made about gay men and HIV/AIDS were not an important part of the story. Character development and background.

The story can't be told without the "reality" of the situation presented, including language and details.

The questionable elements are an important part of developing Precious' background and creating a greater understanding of her circumstances, trials, and ultimately, her ability to begin to see herself as a whole and worthy person despite her circumstances.

Without the discussion of incest, we would not be able to be fully aware of Precious' situation. She is raped, has no one to help her, she feels alone, and has developed a hatred of people. The language that is present in the book is a result of the environment in which Precious is raised.

This work is most suitable for which grades?

The following were selected:

The following were checked:

9-12, None

Taken as a whole, does this work have literary, artistic, political or scientific value for the suggested audience?

Yes:

This story includes a very artistic presentation of a journey from complete illiteracy to English language competency. It also discusses the way in which students can fail by the wayside in their education regardless of how smart they are or how persistent they are in their attempts to understand what's being presented in the classroom.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

This book is absolutely realistic and shows the inner dialogue of a teenager that has suffered unimaginable heartbreak and abuse.

H.S. students discovering who they are and where they belong in this world - need to be exposed to and understand different social, economic, political and educational levels other than their own.

Take as a whole, Push does have literary and artistic value. It is rare for a novel this raw and devastating to have such a profound effect on the reader. Partly, this story works because it is told from the first-person perspective of Precious, an illiterate, overweight young Black woman. From the first pages, the reader is transported into her mind, her views, and the inner workings of her feelings regarding herself and her relationship to the world around her.

I believe there is literary value in Sapphire's work. We would be naive to think that in our county there is not some teenagers who are experiencing the same trauma as Precious. Even if they are not experiencing the circumstances of incest, they may be the victim of rape.

What is the overall purpose, theme or message of the material?

The overall purpose of the material is to insight into the most marginalized members of our society. The book's title "Push" is exactly what the main character worked to do: push past the obstacles in her life that were no fault of her own to create a better life for herself and for her child.

Gives insight on problems that other young adults are enduring or to provide a support system for those who are already enduring similar obstacles.

Redemption. Growth/development/self-worth. Overcoming/surviving negative aspects in life.

Ultimately, this is a story of triumph, as Precious finds the strength to disentangle herself from her surrounding, move int a halfway house, and begin t learn how to read and write. While the story does not necessarily end on a glorious note, with Precious revealing her AIDS diagnosis, it does present the reader with a sense of hope, for all Precious has endured and survived, and will continue to do so.

Survival and rising above the circumstances of your life.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

Are the concepts presented in a manner appropriate to the ability and maturity level of the suggested audience?

Yes:

This book is listed at 10th grade and higher or 11th grade and higher on different websites including NCTE, Scholastic, Mackin, etc. We have students that are facing the same situation as Precious, our narrator. That's why I believe this book is presented in a manner appropriate to the ability and maturity level of the suggested audience of grades 11 and 12.

H.S students are mature enough to handle this content. Most of them are exposed to more than this through social media and, unfortunately, from personal experience (for some). It provides for those who personally relate and can help their friends understand their challenges.

Most high school students have already been exposed to, through popular media, to much more graphic and profane material which has no literary value. Most, if not all 15-18-year-olds that I am familiar with would be mature enough to dissect the material in an appropriate manner.

No:

If the suggested audience is 9-12, it should not be read without guidance.

While many of the challenges Precious faces are not unique to many of the challenges our high school students face, it will take an extraordinary amount of maturity to be able to endure Push and Precious' story. It is best read with the support of a teacher or trusted adult, or read as an adult.

Are illustrations appropriate for the suggested audience's developmental age?

N/A

Will reading or listening to this work result in a more compassionate understanding of human beings?

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

Yes:

When we remain in our own bubble of life that we create for ourselves, we are limited in our exposure to different life experiences. That moves us to act out of ignorance instead of information. Educators are encouraged to build relationships. Those relationships can not be without an openness to the possibility that students' lives may be more difficult than we could even imagine. This book reminds people that everyone has potential to them. It takes patience and willingness to learn on the part of both parties.

Absolutely, I felt gutted for Precious while I was reading this story. I gained a lot of compassion for her and other people that may deal with the same issues. It shows Precious and her growth with literacy as well.

Anyone reading this book will feel compassion for the characters and their life stories. It may help some students realize the unfortunate things suffer through and treat them with more respect and compassion.

Through her journal entries, Precious' voice provides the reader with the opportunity to relate to someone who has endured unbelievable and devastating challenges. Yet, Precious is resilient and shows what can be accomplished through hopefulness, dedication, and hard work. Precious' story may not be relatable to all readers; however, it does serve to show the dignity that we all deserve as humans, regardless of our circumstances.

Through reading about Precious and her circumstances we are able to have a more developed understanding of the human condition, and hopefully a deeper compassion for someone who may be very different from ourselves.

Does the work offer an opportunity to understand and better appreciate the aspirations, achievements, and problems of different cultures or minority groups?

Yes:

This book focuses on the main character, a young Black woman. Many times the voices of Black women are silenced. Many Black students are dismissed because no one is willing to be patient with them and their journeys. Also, with the admission that the APA has focused mainly on the psyche and behaviors of white particularly white males, manifestations of the autism spectrum, ADHD, ADD, trauma-based mental illnesses and other mental disorders are unknown. This book calls educators and counselors to look at Black students in a holistic manner with a lens of grace.

Escambia County Public Schools District Materials Review Committee Decision

Absolutely. Like I said above. Child and sexual abuse, teenage pregnancy, self-discovery, and the need to belong are all problems that can affect young adults.

Although abuse is not limited by race or socio-economic status it is more prevalent, statistically, to minority groups, as depicted in this book.

Push is told through the first-person perspective of Precious, utilizing her voice to portray her illiteracy and, ultimately, growth both intellectually and personally. Through her journal entries, Precious' voice provides the reader with the opportunity to relate to someone who has endured unbelievable and devastating challenges. Yet, Precious is resilient and shows what can be accomplished through hopefulness, deviation, and hard work, Readers may relate to Precious' struggle to fit in and be part of a group, which Precious finds through Ms. Rain and her support group.

Through reading about Precious and her circumstances we are able to have a more developed understanding of the human condition; and hopefully, develop a deeper compassion for someone who may be very different from ourselves.

NON-FICTION ONLY: Does the material contribute to the evolution of ideas and/or support state education standards?

ELA 612.F.2AP.3a - Encode single syllable and multisyllabic words using the students' mode of communication.

SS.912.P.10.6 Discuss how privilege and power structures relate to stereotypes and discrimination

SS.912.p.10.12 Examine how perspectives affect stereotypes and treatment of minority and majority groups in society.

RE: Appeal for "Push"

Dear Escambia County School Board Members:

Please find attached an appeal of the District Materials Review Committee's decision for "Push," by Sapphire.

Once again, under the guidance of our District Media Specialist, Ms. Michelle White, a District Review Committee has ignored the law and voted 4 to 1 to keep the novel "Push" in our high school libraries. In their typical fashion, the committee claims that most high school students are mature enough for this book because "most of them are exposed to more than this through social media and, unfortunately, from personal experience (for some)." The committee further suggests that apparently those of us who depend on our School Board to follow the law and remove books that are prurient or aberrant in nature, not age-appropriate or content-appropriate, "remain in our own bubble of life that we create for ourselves;" therefore, limiting "our exposure to different life experiences," an act that the committee claims "moves us to act out of ignorance instead of information."

Not surprisingly, in their decision to me, the District Review Committee assumed this book was non-fiction and even listed three standards that they thought this book utilized. I find this interesting considering they took so much time to look up reviews about WHY high school minors need this book. Evidently, I need to move the committee out of ignorance with information that this book is fiction, and fiction must follow certain writing rules. The purpose of fiction writing is simply TO ENTERTAIN. It is not to inform or educate. Based on that fact alone, having a book available to minors whose primary purpose is to entertain about a child whose father "slams his hips into me HARD. I scream pain he come. He slap my thighs like cowboys do horses on TV. Shiver. Orgasm in me, his body shaking, grab me, call me Fat Mama, Big Hole! You LOVE it! Say you love it! I wanna say I DON"T. I wanna say I'm a chile. But my pussy popping like grease in frying pan. He slam in me again. His dick soft. He start sucking my tittie" (p. 127) would definitely be considered a violation of the law for our school district. Kuddos to the one committee member who obviously read the law and read the book before making an informed decision on facts rather than feelings.

Many states have already pulled this book because of the sexually graphic content and violent language, and the horrific and inappropriate graphic acts of incest throughout the book. This is one whose contents actually made me sick while trying to digest.

Perhaps our Board could give specific guidance to those in charge of our District Committees or even those who also have the authority to remove or restrict books when those books cross the line of “acceptable standards.” Or better yet, perhaps our Board would simply start restricting or removing books based on the law, rather than waste so much time doing a dance. This book was originally submitted August 24, 2022. Wouldn't we all agree that reading page after page of how a mother puts her hand between her 12-year old daughter's legs and “the smell fill room,” but then her hand eventually becomes a “creepy spider, up my legs, in my pussy” or how her own father is “fucking me illegal. But I keep my mouf shut so's the fucking don't turn into a beating. I start to feel goo; stop being a video dancer and start coming.”

Do you wonder why parents and other community members are so concerned? THIS IS NOT LITERATURE, and any attempt to disguise it as such should be concerning to all.

Please see excerpts below. (Typed as written.)

I was left back when I was twelve because I had a baby for my fahver.(p. 16)

"Mama push my head down in her..." I can't talk no more. (p. 145)

Shall I keep going? There are 100 plus more pages to go, but I am certain you get the point. FS 847.012 says it is a blatant violation to offer obscene and pornographic material to minors. Do we need an entertaining book about a father pumping his 12-year-old daughter's "pussy" so much that he makes her "pussy pop like grease in a frying pan" and then she "comes." Do high school students, "discovering who they are and where they belong in this world" really "need to be exposed to and understand different social, economic, political and educational levels other than their own," as the committee claims – all through the assistance of THIS book? I'm sure we are all in agreement in our answer to this.

“The first piece of paper is bright yellow, with the words "Transgender 101" written across the top. The one beneath it is green, titled "Local Resources for LGBTQ Youth." The one underneath is called "Our Stories," and it's a few pages stapled together. I skim through it, and it looks like stories of gay and lesbian and trans teenagers talking about themselves.

The rest of the box is filled with papers like this. Lots of newspaper and magazine articles, some about gay and lesbian people, but mostly about transgender people. There's an entire Time magazine, with an actress named Laverne Cox on the cover. And an issue of National Geographic with another trans person, this one a kid, on the front.

...I know what "transgender" means. It means that someone is born one way, a girl or a boy, but that doesn't feel right to them, so they change. Maybe they take medicine or get different surgeries” (p. 137)

“The first day of the rest of my life as a boy, as a transgender.

...I haven't rally imagined myself from the outside since coming out as trans. It's right to think of myself as a boy, but wrong to picture it like it's happening to someone else. I want to experience this day and every day as myself. Me, the real me, not some other boy.” (p. 187)

She could ball, and she was fine as hell. Plus she had a ass. (p. 10)

I fell asleep in US history. It was boring anyway. I'm tired of hearing 'bout all these fucked-up white people who did fucked-up stuff, yet people wanna call them heroes. Phillips talked 'bout how Columbus discovered America, and all I could think was how the hell can you "discover" a place where people already lived? (p. 87)

Problem was he hated his coach. To be honest, everybody hated Coach Stevens. Dude was a straight-up redneck. He didn't throw around the N-word, nah. It was other stuff, like having a Confederate flag on his truck, calling it "heritage." Heritage my ass. One day last year he told King to wash his car before practice. King told Coach Stevens he wasn't his slave. Coach looked him dead in the face and said, "You are whatever the hell I say you are, boy." (p. 90)

Lisa look at it, too. Then she look me in the eye and unzip my pants. It's on.

I help her get out that dress, and she help me get my pants off. We both down to nothing when we slide under her covers. I'm ready to put it down.

"Shit!" I hiss, and raise up. "I don't got a rubber."

Lisa sit up a little. "Seriously?"

"Yeah. I ain't have no reason to keep them on me. You on the pill, right?"

"No. Had no reason to be."

For a few seconds, our heavy breathing the only sound in the room.

The way she feel against me . . . it's driving me outta my mind. "I could be careful—"

"If you pull out before you—"

We spoke at the same time. Our eyes lock, and, goddamn, I want her bad.

"Do you wanna do this?" I ask.

Lisa bite her lip. "Yeah. Do you?"

I never wanted anything more in my life. "Yeah."

Lisa pull me back down and kiss my neck. "Then be careful."

That's all I need to hear (p. 137)

Damn. That was wild.

Me and Lisa lying in her bed, all sweaty and panting. We went at it for hours.

A'ight, an hour. A'ight, a'ight, more like fifteen, twenty, ten minutes. Either way, I did the damn thing.

This was the first time we ever had sex without protection. I see what the homies mean, it do feel different. I was careful though, just like I said I'd be.

I brush Lisa's hair back and kiss her forehead. Your boy made her sweat them baby hairs out. Hell yeah. "Damn, I missed you."

She cuddle up against me. "I can't lie, I missed you too."

"I could tell, the way you were screaming. (p. 141)

"We were tryna get some ass, and you were cock-blocking," Shawn says (p. 156).
